SAYS VALUES GO TO DEPTH IN CARIBOO

Report of English Engineer on Gold Quartz Predicts Long Life for Mine

THINKS DEPOSITS ARE DEEP-SEATED

Of utmost importance to mining in Cariboo and throughout British Columbia generally is the report, just received in Vancouver, of the examination of the Cariboo Gold Quartz property at Cow Mountain, Jack of Clubs Lake, made by J. Norman Wynne, M.E., of the London firm of McCarthy & Binns. While the report is a most exhaustive one, Dr. W. B. Burnett, president of the Cariboo Gold Quartz, stated that it was highly satisfactory. He intimated that while the directors had not yet had an opportunity of fully examining the report and preparing a digest of it, the tenor of it was that there was every reason to believe that the mine would be a big one and have a long life.

DEEP VALUES
Mr. Wynne stated, after five weeks of careful examination of the property, it was learned that there was every indication that the ore would go down to the limit of mineable depth. This opinion is regarded as being of the greatest importance, and will have a large influence upon the further development of a number of properties in the Cariboo area.

LAWYER FACES FRAUD CHARGE

Pierce Loneragan, Seattle Attorney, Sought for Violation of Statute

SEATTLE, Sept. 1 (AP).—Pierce Loneragan, prominent attorney and president of the Seattle Metal Exchange, was sought tonight on a Federal warrant charging him with violation of the mail fraud statutes in connection with the operations of the exchange. Investigators said investors had lost approximately $100,000.

The warrant for his arrest was issued by United States Commissioner H. S. Elliott, upon the filing of a complaint by Postoffice Inspector J. S. Swenson.

His whereabouts were a mystery tonight, with Mrs. Loneragan saying she had not seen her husband since 4 o'clock yesterday morning. At his office he was reported to return some time next week, the inspectors said.

DEALS IN SILVER

Some time prior to last January 1, the complaint charged, Loneragan "devised a scheme to defraud" investors, who were induced to purchase margin accounts on silver for future delivery, on the representation that the Seattle Metal Exchange was open and free, with prices following the New York and world silver markets.

The silver was to be delivered to purchasers as called for by their orders, the complaint said, or else sold if they so requested.

ACCOUNTS CLOSED OUT

Instead, the Government charged, Loneragan failed to deliver delivery of silver, and closed out investors' accounts by representing that the price of silver had fallen to the point where the margin payments did not protect the accounts.

Loneragan is also president of Pierce Loneragan Company, a brokerage firm which is a member of the exchange.

STORM IN TEXAS TAKES ONE LIFE

Man on Truck Killed by Lightning—Automobiles Washed Down City Streets

CLARENDON, Texas, Sept. 1 (AP).—One person was killed by lightning late today as the heaviest rainfall ever recorded here sent a four-foot wall of water rushing through the lower section of this Northwestern Texas city.

Alfred Waite, sixteen, was struck by lightning and killed, as he rode into Clarendon on a truck. Five other persons in the truck, including John Nichols, driver, were dazed but not hurt seriously.

Automobiles were washed down the streets and over curbs into sidewalks. Business houses were flooded with from two to twelve inches of water.

Tourist Travel to B.C. Shows Largest Increase in Years

Railway Traffic Is Heaviest in Last Three Years

KAMLOOPS, Sept. 1 (CP).—Railway passengers and wheat movements through Kamloops have been unusually heavy recently and men who have not received a call in two years have been receiving work. Both Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways have been working at the highest peak since 1931, it is reported.

Young Boy Lands Fine Prize Fish

To land a twenty-two-and-a-half-pound fighting tye salmon, on a light rod and a thin cotton line, is a feat that any fisherman would proudly boast about. Bobby Palmer, ten years of age, did that very thing the other day at Brentwood, and will proudly wear the bronze button of the Victoria and Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association.

Bobby Palmer lives at 935 Indian Hill, Clarendon, California. He came to Victoria, last week, with his parents, on a visit. They were fishing with Bill Thorne, and Bobby was trolling with a six-strand cotton line and Heddon plug when the big below struck. Bobby played the fish like a veteran, and successfully landed him, to receive the congratulations of his family, and the distinction of the Anglers' Association.

HOPE OF ENDING WARFARE FADES

Bolivia Places Reservations on Accepting Proposals for Chaco Peace

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 1 (AP).—Bolivia apparently has "formulated two reservations" in connection with proposals for peace in the Chaco advanced by the United States, Brazil and Argentina, Justo Pastor Benitez, Paraguayan Minister to Brazil, said tonight.

While "Paraguay has accepted without reservation," Benitez said, "it appears" that the two Bolivian reservations will include her old demand for an outlet to the Paraguay River, one of South America's important commercial arteries.

WOULD SEEK SETTLEMENT

"If the arbitration proposed by the three nations is accepted," Benitez said, "a conference will be held at Buenos Aires in an effort to solve the Chaco question definitely.

"If the conference failed to reach a solution after three months, the case would be submitted to the Hague.

"During the arbitration conference a truce would be declared in the area of hostilities."

Paraguay pushed the offensive in three sectors of the Chaco, tonight, as yesterday's hopes that an armistice in the long struggle has nearly faded.

LONDON, Sept. 1 (CP-Havas).—After nine months of labor, the Royal Navy today raised and refloated the German cruiser Bayern, 28,000 tons, which the Germans scuttled at Scapa Flow.

Traffic Approaches Peak Figures of Boom Years

—Bookings on Coastal Boats Are Particularly Heavy—Train Travelers Increase; 20,000 Come on Cent-Mile Excursions

By FORREST RHODE

VANCOUVER, Sept. 1 (CP).—British Columbia's tourist business is booming all along the line this year, in some departments coming within striking distance of the peak years of prosperity, and in others showing solid gains over last year and the year before.

The most colorful aspect, perhaps, is the extent to which visitors have gone sea-minded. It may be the drought that afflicted so much of the mid-continent, but, at any rate, travelers from all over Canada, especially the Prairies; from practically every state of the United States, and from far corners of the earth, are taking salt-air tonic in the coastal waters.

ENJOY SCENERY

DEATH CLAIMS HON. W. A. BLACK

Well-Known Eastern Business Leader Passes Away at Home in Halifax

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 1 (CP).—Hon. William Anderson Black, M.P. for Halifax, a Privy Councillor of Canada and former Minister of Railways, died at his home here tonight. He was eighty-seven years old.

Mr. Black was first elected to the House of Commons in 1923 when he was seventy-six years old. A by-election was held to fill the vacancy caused by the elevation of Hon. A. K. MacLean to the Exchequer Court, and Mr. Black broke the ranks of the "solid sixties" Liberals who had represented Nova Scotia since 1921. He was appointed Minister of Railways and Canals in 1926 in the Government of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen.

DEAN OF SHIPPING MEN
Mr. Black was born in Windsor, N.S., in 1847, son of Samuel Gay Black and Sophia Wright, both Canadians. He was head of the firm of Pickford & Black, and recognized as the dean of Maritime Provinces' shipping men when he entered Federal politics.

Mr. Black was chairman of the board of the Eastern Trust Company, a director of the Royal Bank of Canada, and a benefactor and governor of Dalhousie University.

All members of his immediate family, his son, Walter, and his two daughters, Mrs. Kathleen Saunders and Mrs. Stewart Gibson, were with him when he died. His wife died in 1924.

NEW GIANT BRITISH LINER TO BE BUILT

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 1 (AP).—A new giant British liner as a sister-ship to the Cunard liner 534 will be started on the same slipway as soon as the liner now in process of construction is launched September 26, according to authoritative Liverpool shipping sources.

Foul Play Is Suspected in Death of Man

VANCOUVER, Sept. 1 (CP).—William Campbell Robertson, East 16th, was found unconscious on the road at East George and Dunlevy Avenue, Friday, and died shortly afterwards in the General Hospital, may have been a victim of foul play, police believe.

Death was not due to heart trouble, medical reports show. Police are investigating the possibility that Robertson had been drugged.

ASK ACTION IN FAR EAST

Russia Plans to Invite League to Examine Tense Political Situation

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Once Russia becomes a member of the League of Nations she will ask that body to examine the tense political situation in the Far East, authoritative sources here said today.

They expect Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, to call to the League's attention the delicate relations between Russia and Japan, growing out of Russia's operation of the Chinese Eastern Railway in Manchukuo.

VIGOROUS PROTEST

The arrest of Russian employees of the C.E.R. for the purchase of which Japan has been negotiating recently, last week provoked Moscow to vigorous diplomatic protest in notes delivered to the Government at Tokyo and Hankow, Manchukuo.

Litvinoff's action, if it takes place, would force Far Eastern problems to the forefront of the League's programme when the assembly meets at Geneva, September 10.

DEFINITELY ASSURED

A high official source said today that Russia's entry into the League at the September meeting is definitely assured, as the powers favoring her candidacy have been advised that several smaller nations have withdrawn active opposition.

England, France and Italy joined in sounding out League members as to their attitude on Moscow's admission.

In addition to possible consideration of the Far Eastern situation, the League will be asked to study the financial and economic plight of Austria, official quarters indicated.

C.P.R. PRESIDENT TO ARRIVE TODAY

E. W. Beatty and Party of Eastern Business Men to Spend Two Days in City

VANCOUVER, Sept. 1 (CP).—President E. W. Beatty, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the party of directors and Eastern business men accompanying him, will spend Sunday in Victoria.

They left here tonight on the midnight boat and will return on the midnight boat from Victoria tomorrow.

Included in the party are W. N. Tilley, K.C., director, Toronto; H. McMaster, director; R. S. McLaughlin, director, Oshawa, Ont.; Senator Smeaton White, publisher of the Montreal Gazette; C. H. Carlisle, Toronto, and D. C. Coleman, vice-president in charge of Western lines.

SCOUTING PLANES SIGHT ABDUCTORS

Japanese Airmen See Chinese Bandits With Men Seized When Train Is Wrecked

TOKIO, Sept. 2 (AP).—Bandits who wrecked a Chinese Eastern Railway train, Thursday, kidnapping an American and two other employees of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company, were reported today to have been sighted by Japanese scouting planes.

A Rengo (Japanese) News Agency dispatch from Harbin said the outlaws had been sighted proceeding in a westerly direction away from the railway. They were on foot, the dispatch said, and observers flying overhead distinctly made out the captives accompanying them.

OFFER INSURANCE ON AIR RACE ENTRANTS

LONDON, Sept. 1 (AP).—A group of leading British and United States underwriters, who formed a pool to insure the contestants in the London-to-Australia air race next month, decided today the entrants have approximately a 12-to-1 chance of escaping death.

The pool announced it would issue life insurance as an 8 per cent premium and a death or disability policy at 10 per cent.

REARRANGEMENT

The new plan does away with temporary work in the audit branch of the service, which mainly originated through administration of the 1 per cent tax on incomes, and may displace some of the personnel temporarily taken on for this work a year ago.

Describing the changes, the Minister of Finance said:

"This is a reorganization of the taxation department with a view to rearrangement of personnel at Victoria and Vancouver offices of the branch."

TEXTILE STRIKE GOES INTO EFFECT IN EASTERN STATES

During Strange Strike

Performers of Station XEAL, Mexico City, are back on the air and feeding up their shrunken figures after winning one of the strangest strikes in history. They went on a hunger strike, and barricaded themselves in the station's studios to broadcast continuously. A trooper is seen performing, attended by nurses after one of his fellow performers had fainted (below).

J. R. Matson Wins Totem Pole Golf Trophy at Jasper

Clever Southpaw Player to Bring Famous Championship Prize to Victoria for First Time—Local Shotmakers Win First and Fifth Flights as Well

JASPER PARK LODGE, Sept. 1.—For the first time in its history, the famous silver Totem Pole Golf Trophy will spend a Winter in Victoria. This was decided today when Jack Matson, one of the cleverest southpaw players in the Pacific Northwest, defeated Reg Arkell, Vancouver, 4 and 3, in the thirty-six-hole final. Yesterday, Mrs. F. Sayward-Wilson, of Victoria, won the women's championship and the prized Totem Pole Trophy by defeating Mrs. Edzie, of Vancouver.

The first flight was won by F. Sayward-Wilson, Victoria, from Norman White, Winnipeg. Stan Small, Vancouver, won the second flight from F. R. Burkham, Los Angeles. Roger Stickland, Saskatoon, won the third flight from J. Markham, Chicago. S. A. Horner, Vancouver, won the fourth flight from G. Murison, Moose Jaw. J. R. McIlwre, Victoria, won the fifth flight from Col. A. C. Gillespie.

The championship game was splendidly contested and contained a full quota of uncertainty to keep the interest of the large gallery until the end. At the end of the first eighteen holes, Matson was one up after being three up at the twelfth.

In the afternoon round Matson was unsteady, and Arkell squared the match at the nineteenth and went one up at the twentieth. Arkell then lost his putting touch and his lapses cost him dearly from there on as Matson settled to his game and played the last ten holes in two over par.

Their long game was fairly even, although Matson was steadier going for the green. The Victoria player's approaches from close to the green, whether from traps or fairway, were deadly, and he determined his opponent's game with his perfect chip.

Boys Find Treasure In Cellar

BALTIMORE, Sept. 1 (AP).—When Theodore Jones, sixteen, and Henry Grob, fifteen, started digging a hole in the cellar they never dreamed of finding a buried treasure.

Before long, however, the two boys had struck a pot of gold—$11,000 in gold coins. They don't know whether the gold belongs to them or not. Police are holding it temporarily.

The pair were digging in the cellar of the Jones home, yesterday, to bury trinkets of a club they formed when they found the treasure.

Walkout Directly Affecting Hundreds of Thousands of Workers Materializes

INDUSTRIAL CENTRES FACE BITTER FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP).—The zero hour for union workers to walk out of the nation's hundreds of textile mills came and passed tonight—and there was no change in their orders to strike until the end.

At headquarters of the United Textile Workers, labor leaders, tired out by days of unfruitful dickering, went to bed, leaving the office dark.

Even the Federal mediators, who had hoped against hope until well into the night, decided the strike was inevitable. They, too, left the National Labor Relations Board's suite in darkness.

The last slender thread of hope the strike would be held off beyond the 11:30 walkout hour was cut when labor leaders, after listening to hours of argument, pleading and coaxing, emerged from the offices of the National Labor Relations Board with the grim assertion "The strike will go on."

TRADE INVOLVED

Involved were 150,000 silk workers, directed to join the others in an order flashed just before noon; 407,000 cotton textile workers and 100,000 woolen mills employees. Affected, too, were 200,000 now unemployed in these industries.

Rebuffed, but doggedly persistent, Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the Labor Relations Board, had waged a twelve-hour battle to avert the catastrophe. Much of the board's own prestige, a possible blow to recovery, probable violence and certain suffering by textile workers all were at stake.

But Garrison himself, after the last of today's conferees, wearily told newspaper men there was no hope of a weakening in the stand of either side before the strike hour.

THREATS MADE

As the day wore on, threats of violence increased. Francis J. Gorman, militant strike general of the union forces, called off a scheduled appearance before a mass meeting of Southern workers in Charlotte, N.C., tomorrow.

He gave as his reason the press of business here.

ROBBERS DRUG SAILOR VICTIMS

Two of H.M.S. Danae's Crew Have Rough Experiences in Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Sept. 1 (CP).—Two sailors were back on board H.M.S. Danae, tonight, a little groggy, but not much the worse for having run afoul of strange drinking companions who apparently used opiates upon them before taking away their money.

Police are holding one man for questioning and are still investigating the circumstances.

The sailors are P. Davis and G. Jackson, and they met misfortune separately. Davis was released from hospital only tonight.

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS

Davis was found unconscious on the floor of a tavern washroom, with his pockets emptied, and remained unconscious in hospital for some time. Police learned that he had been drinking with two men, one of whom called a messenger boy, who delivered a small packet to him.

A suspect was taken into custody after a search of various taverns.

Jackson was found in a dazed condition on Granville Street, also drugged and robbed. He could give no clue as to what happened to him.

VICTORIA JOCKEY HURT IN OREGON

Gene Ross Recovering From Injuries Received When Mount Falls Dead in Race

OREGON, Sept. 1 (AP).—Jockey Gene Ross, twenty-eight, of Victoria, was recovering in hospital, tonight, from injuries suffered when he was thrown from his dying horse, in the sixth race, here, last night.

Ross is in no danger and his condition is good, it was stated at the hospital.

Ross' mount, Forecaster, a twelve-year-old gelding, rolled over dead after crossing the finish line.

Ross suffered a fractured jaw and bruised head, and lost some teeth.

PROTESTS TO JAPAN OVER TORTURE CASE

Brutal Treatment of Russian Woman Is Alleged by Soviet Commissar

SEEKS STEPS TO END INTOLERABLE ACTIONS

MOSCOW, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Soviet Government protested today to Tamekichi Ota, Japanese Ambassador, against the alleged torture of a woman employee of the Chinese Eastern Railway at Harbin, Manchukuo, whose hair was said to have been pulled out by gendarmes. Assistant Commissar of Foreign Affairs Stomonyakoff told Ota that a woman supply clerk of the railway, named Golovina, was arrested and rendered unconscious by third degree methods at the hands of Japanese authorities. The Commissar told the Ambassador that the Soviet Government was waiting for decisive action on the part of the Japanese Government to "stop all intolerable actions" which "such obvious harm to the relations between the two states."

FAINTED FROM PAIN

A Soviet communique describing the interview between Ambassador Ota and Stomonyakoff on August 31 said the woman was beaten about the face and head, her hair pulled out, pieces of metal placed between her fingers and her hands bound tightly, with the result that she fainted.

The statement said that Japanese employees had poured water into the woman's nose and throat, and mistreated her so badly she was ill in a hospital.

ARRESTED BEFORE

The statement further said the woman was arrested August 22 and released August 27, but told she would be arrested again as soon as her health improved. Stomonyakoff told Ota the treatment of Miss Golovina was confirmed by information the press had about the alleged inhumane treatment of other Soviet employees in an effort to make them admit they had plotted wrecks and disorders along the Chinese Eastern Railway.

shots. Matson gave a fine demonstration of putting during the latter part of the afternoon. Arkell put up a game and courageous fight, however, against his more experienced opponent and the gallery were given plenty of thrills.

MORNING ROUND

In the morning round the first two holes were halved. Arkell took the third, but Matson squared it at the fourth with a corking drive to the green. The fifth was a half, and the sixth went to Matson when Arkell's putt stopped on the rim of the cup. The seventh was a par half when Arkell got into trouble. On the eighth Matson went two up with a par. Arkell holed a fine birdie putt on the ninth.

The long tenth was a half, and Matson took the eleventh and the twelfth in par. This put Matson three up. His advantage was short-lived, however, as Arkell played the next three holes one under par and squared the match. The sixteenth was a half, but Matson took the seventeenth. A half at the eighteenth ended the morning

Unusual Photograph of Great Taseko Valley

This view of the Taseko Valley—also known as the Whitewater Valley—was taken from the top of Warner Pass, where the trail from Bridge River to the Chilco Lake country ascends to more than 8,000 feet. The view shown above gives an excellent idea of this section of British Columbia, which is attracting a great deal of attention from mining men. Prospectors and mining experts are predicting great developments here. Already one property, the Taylor Windfall, is in active operation. The picture was taken by Ray Castle, on the occasion of a recent visit to the locality.

round. Matson had 76 and Arkell 78 approximately.

AFTERNOON ROUND

Arkell squared the match in the afternoon on the first hole and took the second with a two. Two halves followed. Matson went one up by taking the fifth and sixth and they halved the turn. A half at the tenth. Matson took the eleventh, and the next two were halved. Matson went another up with a par at the fourteenth and won the match at the fifteenth when Arkell's putt for a par failed to drop.

The golf week was officially brought to a close when the prizes were presented in front of the lodge. A long table of prizes, decked with a Union Jack, and with hundreds in attendance, presented a colorful spectacle. Joseph Van Wyck, general manager of Canadian National hotels, in a neat address of thanks to those present, introduced His Honor W. L. Walsh, Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta, who personally presented prizes to all concerned. This marked the close of one of the most successful golf tournaments ever held in the Pacific Northwest.

more effective results, particularly in the collection of income taxes, which fell much in arrears. In the reorganization all those formerly connected with the department will be reassigned to the new organization, with the possible exception of some auditors, who were temporarily engaged in connection with the 1 per cent levy. It is not quite certain yet whether those in this branch of the service will fit into the new organization or not.

A tightening up of collections under the Income Tax Act is seen as part of the reason for the inauguration of the new plan. Simplification of the system of rebates, and remission of the 1 per cent tax on incomes of $600 per annum, have also brought about changes in the duties of the branch. Permanent staffs will be little affected by the move, it is believed.

EXPLAINS NEW CANCER TESTS

French Scientist Claims New Discovery to Detect Dread Disease

PARIS.—A new method by which cancer can be diagnosed with rapidity and certainty has been described to the French Academy of Sciences by Professor Jacques Arsene d'Arsonval, who is noted for his work in electro-therapeutics. The method has been discovered by a Polish physician, Dr. Ladislav Kopaczewski, who is a pupil of Professor d'Arsonval. A scientific means of diagnosing cancer is regarded as one of the biggest steps in combating the disease in its early stages.

USE BLOOD TEST

As described by Professor d'Arsonval, the method employed is to congeal the patient's blood by incorporating in it a 10 per cent solution of lactic acid of a temperature of one degree centigrade, which is a little above freezing point on the Fahrenheit scale.

"It will now be possible," said Dr. Kopaczewski, "for any human being to undergo cheaply and as often as he feels desirable tests to satisfy himself that he is or is not suffering from cancer or cancerous tumor. The blood of a normally healthy man without cancer should congeal in the conditions stipled with the addition of lactic acid in about two hours."

"The blood of persons suffering from the worst of cancers congeals almost instantly. Between these two extremes we have charted an index which allows of positive proof whether a person is suffering from cancer or not, and, if he is suffering, to what degree."

FACE LIFTERS UNDER ARREST

Seven Persons Held for Aiding Dillinger and Van Meter to Avoid Capture

CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (AP).—The Dillinger "mark" fell upon seven more persons, today, two of them, admittedly, plastic surgeons who tried to rebuild beyond recognition the faces and hands of John Dillinger and his lieutenant, Homer Van Meter.

Prize catch of the lot was announced as Louis P. Piquett, a former city prosecutor and counsel for the slain Dillinger. He was locked up in default of $50,000 bond, accused of harboring the outlaw and engaging the two doctors to perform the operations—blamed generally for the desperado's success in evading capture here so long.

IMPORTANT ARREST

The arrest of Piquett was termed "one of the most important in years" by United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green. He said additional charges would be filed against him early next week. The surgeons, Dr. Wilhelm Looser and Dr. Harold Bernard Cassidy, this afternoon pleaded guilty to charges against them and were held in bonds of $25,000 each. In addition, Arthur W. O'Leary, an employee of Piquett, entered a guilty plea.

Piquett denied any guilt when the seven persons seized last night were arranged before U.S. Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. He muttered "I framed," when the physicians and O'Leary pleaded guilty. Federal agents said the attorney fled his office yesterday when he received a tip that they were after him. He was captured near his home. The others under arrest are William Finerty and his wife, Ella, and Marie Confort. They pleaded not guilty to charges of harboring Van Meter.

To Set New Mark

CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (AP).—Soaring in a circle above Curtiss-Reynolds airport, Jess Lawrence and Mary Elizabeth Owens, young Texas flyers, today started their third attempt to set a new endurance record in their monoplane, "The Lone Star."

They took off at 10:44 a.m. Central standard time. Six hours later the first re-fueling contact was negotiated successfully.

RUSSIANS PLAN NORTHERN TREK

Moscow Motor Club Outlines Itinerary Covering 12,000 Miles by Automobiles

MOSCOW.—The Moscow Motor Club is organizing the first motor car expedition into the frozen wastes of the far North that has ever taken place in Soviet history. Two passenger cars and five expedition vehicles will take part in the expedition. They will be equipped with special "super-balloons" tires to negotiate the frozen, roadless country. Their itinerary will cover 12,000 miles. After leaving Moscow, the vehicles will go to Kazan, Perm, Novosibirsk, and Krasnoyarsk, where they will be loaded on a ship up the Enisei River to Dudinka. The caravan will then travel overland to Cape Chukchi, on to Norwik, then to Balmuk at the mouth of the Lena River, and from there through Yakutsk and Urukulak back to Moscow.

The purpose of the expedition is to test the practicability of operating this type of motor vehicle in the far North.

TOURIST TRAVEL IS HEAVIEST IN YEARS

convoys, stretched out in long lines, and with capacity loads. Nearly 100,000 persons have viewed mountain-palisaded inlets, sanded islands, or grim Northern coasts. Twenty thousand people have come by cent-a-mile excursions, and later figures will show a greater increase. The increase has taken place in spite of whatever reducing effect the end of prohibition in the United States may have brought about. Further, the travel from the United States, and elsewhere, is of a substantial nature.

Visitors are spending more money, and spending it somewhat differently. In the past few years tourists came on carefully-planned budgets, with enough money to get to their particular destinations and back. This year they come prepared for side trips, with the result that the tour companies are making more money. The tourists are spreading their money over a longer period.

The Canadian Pacific Railway reports gains over the 1933 season by both rail and steamship of about 30 per cent. Not since the days of 1929 and 1930 has the Canadian National Railways experienced passenger traffic into British Columbia such as took place this year. Practically all available cars were being sent into the province, swelling the number of employees. In addition to low-fare travel, there was excellent business "behind the diner," or in the standard cars. Visitors to Jasper came in greater numbers than since 1929. United States tourists were back in the Rockies in increased numbers after a few years of stay-at-home.

Canadian Pacific hotel heads at Victoria, Vancouver, Lake Louise, Banff Springs, Emerald Lake, and at numerous bungalow camps, are smiling. ALL SUCCESSFUL Special excursions of the C.P.R.'s Coast service out of Vancouver and Victoria are estimated to have carried 25,000 people. In more than eighty cruises the company did not report a failure. Regular business on the British Columbia Coast service showed fine gains, both as to passengers and automobiles. Travel between Seattle, Victoria and Vancouver on the triangle route; Vancouver and Northern British Columbia ports; Vancouver, Nanaimo and Victoria; and Stevenson and Sidney, was well up for June, July and August.

Ss. Princess Victoria, moored alongside Newcastle Island wharf as a floating hotel, has been booked to capacity, and the old blue ribbon of the triangle route has been logging an average of 200 guests daily. EXTRA SAILINGS Twelve sailings on the Alaska route were augmented by an extra sailing with every ship booked practically to capacity both north and southbound.

The Canadian National sent eleven ships to Alaska booked to the limit, and reported a prosperous Queen Charlotte Islands trade. Union Steamship Company vessels sailed out of Vancouver on longer coastal runs and shorter part-day trips, with many thousands of passengers, tourists and picnicers. Other excursion steamers added to the totals of the larger companies.

Automobile entries from the United States are compiled at the end of the fiscal year, but passengers crossing the border for Vancouver alone to the end of July totaled 18,846. With these, the trip from Vancouver to Nanaimo and over the Malahat to Victoria, or vice-versa, has been popular. Many put their cars into garages and took to the Northern tour. Probably more than 200,000 people came into Vancouver during the year.

This year's flood of sunshine was golden in more ways than one. It stimulated the travel-urge. An examination of the automobiles passing any part of entry on the international border on any particular day will indicate what the weather was on that date without recourse to meteorological records. Transportation companies and tourist agencies believe the broad advance of this year is the harbinger of still better things in seasons to come. And after the summer months are over, they hope for a prosperous season on Canada's Winter playgrounds.

mittee to order him to remain in Washington. President Thomas P. McMahon of the United Textile Workers, Gorman and other union officials shunted back and forth during the day from strike headquarters to the office of the National Labor Board. No details of the discussion were divulged.

ARRESTS MADE Tension mounted rapidly as the strike deadline neared. In many communities workers "jumped the gun." Arrests had been made in Macon, Ga., where a mob, yesterday, blocked a train at the Bibb mill. New England manufacturers did not deny rumors that strikebreakers were being imported, and both mill owners and strike leaders anticipated clashes with Communists.

Of possible violence, Gorman had this to say: "Our instructions are specific—to be peaceful, if possible; but if our workers are slugged by hired thugs they are advised to slug back." The strike committee sent telegrams to the Governors of twenty-two states, asking protection from "either the forces of employers or the invidious and disruptive forces of Communism." Strike leaders scattered to points in the field to direct meetings tomorrow and Labor Day. Gorman will broadcast a message to all workers at 1 p.m. E.S.T. tomorrow. The workers have been organized into squads of ten, each under a captain, whose responsibility is to maintain "disciplined restraint under provocation."

Claims of manufacturers and strike leaders as to the extent of the strike were at sharp variance. Mill owners predicted few workers would leave the mills; the union asserted that "Not a wheel will turn," and that more than 1,000,000 workers will be involved. The answer will be seen on Monday, when most Southern mills will not be open until Tuesday, but in the South indications are that few companies will "lock out the workers."

TAX REMOVALS AID BUSINESS

Luxury Levy Off in France—Stimulation of Trade Is Result

PARIS, Sept. 1.—That the luxury tax was bad for business has been abundantly proved since its recent abolition. And more than one department has found that when taxation passes a certain limit, it ceases to yield any benefit to the Treasury. Jewelers, dealers in certain articles of furniture and perfumers were formerly subjected to a tax of from 6 to 12 per cent, while florists, dressmakers, hotel and restaurant keepers and dealers in motor cars also had to pay a luxury tax ranging from 3 to 6 per cent. Foreign clients were for the most part using currencies which had gone off the gold standard, and this made business extra bad.

BUSINESS BETTER

Since the tax has been repealed, however, business has increased. Many shops are offering their wares at lower figures than even the most optimistic buyers expected and the turnover tax will more than repay the State for its luxury tax sacrifice. Special efforts are being made to reduce the general cost of living. While dressmakers and drapers are marking down their dainty creations, butchers and fruiterers are setting out attractive cheap food counters. They are somewhat discouraged by the sceptical attitude of the Parisienne, who fears that what is cheap now must be of poor quality, but the cheaper-living movement is determined to fight on.

GIVE FREE TRAVEL

The latest inducement offered by cafe keepers to their clients is free travel. Consumers of coffee and aperitifs are given tickets which, when collected in sufficient numbers, entitle the customer to a free ticket to his chosen holiday resort. Very thirsty clients can acquire a really extensive tour at the end of six months! One grocer includes a free railway trip of a quarter-kilometer in every box of almonds and raisins and many shopkeepers are distributing vouchers which entitle the holders to shares in winning tickets in the national lottery. Chances of from 30 to 1,000 francs may be acquired by one of these bonus vouchers.

SAYS VALUES GO TO DEPTH IN CARIBBOO

examination of the property indicated that the mine had a production limit of about ten years, and did not give indications of permanency beyond that period. This report had a derogatory effect on confidence in Cariboo mining.

Mr. Wynne was sent out by English investors who planned to expend a large amount of capital in power development in the Barker-ville area, provided there was any probability of Cariboo mines being permanent producers. As a result of Mr. Wynne's report, it is stated from Quesnel, supplies are already being forwarded to Stump River for the purpose of commencing development. Taking advantage of his presence here, the directors of the Cariboo Gold Quartz sought his services to make a complete investigation of the property, and have an entirely independent report issued, and approached McCarthy & Binns, recognized as one of the leading firms of engineers in the Empire, to that effect.

CAREFUL SURVEY

From what could be learned by The Colonist last night, the report made by Mr. Wynne to his principals and forwarded by McCarthy & Binns to the company is based on a minute examination of the property, covering a period of five weeks. Mr. Wynne personally tested the different quartz showings, making channel samples himself, and even going to the extent of sacking them with his own hands. These he forwarded to London for analysis. Upon his careful survey of the property, it is said, he came to the conclusion that the Cariboo Gold Quartz could be developed into a big producer, and that its values might go down to the very limits of mineable depth. Some idea of the importance of this suggestion may be obtained from the fact that in the Robinson Deep Reef Mine, in South Africa, mining is being conducted at the present time at a depth of 8,500 feet.

BENEFITS DISTRICT

While the Wynne report envisions a bright future for this particular mine, it is of equally great value to the district where other properties have deposits that are similar in character to those in the Cow Mountain Mine. It is understood that as soon as the directors have had an opportunity of examining the full report a summary of the opinions and recommendations of Mr. Wynne will be made public.

FOR UNIFIED CONTROL

Mr. E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, deserves every credit for his continued advocacy of the necessity of unification of administration of the two trans-continental lines. On his present visit to the West, and he is now in Victoria, he has assuredly come into immediate contact with many instances which emphasize the importance of the stand he has taken. The fact is that no one who has traveled through the country can fail to have noted ways and means in connection with transportation where very elaborate economies could be effected. Mr. Beatty is right when he says that there is a constantly-growing appreciation that the transportation system as it stands has unnecessary features. It is uneconomic. Under unified control steps could be taken, on a purely business basis, to bring about economies ranging from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 a year.

The crux of the matter is that with the two railways maintaining their competitive independence, no matter how great a desire there may be for co-operation in economies, there is a limit to the savings that will be effected. Political and sectional considerations will continue to crop up, pressure will be brought to bear against this, that, or the other economy being put into practice, and there will be apparent divisions of opinion as to the right course to be pursued. Under unified control these considerations would be wiped out, because such control, privately exercised, would be designed in the interests of the railway transportation system as a whole.

The campaign started by Mr. Beatty is one that should interest every taxpayer in the country, because if it could be brought to a successful issue it would mean less taxes. The Canadian National continues to cost the people of Canada at least a million dollars a week, and even under the co-operation plans for greater economies, it is doubtful if this loss can be very much lessened. It could be wiped out under unified control. This problem of railway losses is easily one of the greatest that the country has to face. It should be faced, in the light of the tremendous losses sustained through public ownership of one of the transcontinental railway companies, with the determination to cut those losses in the future and thus relieve the taxpayers. There is no better or more assured way than the proposal laid before the people of Canada by the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. There is no one more thoroughly acquainted with the entire transportation situation than he is.

EXSURGAT DEUS!

It was once said that there can be no depression in a nation whose soul refuses to be depressed. Half of the world's troubles, perhaps a much greater proportion, may be traced to mental depression for which there is possibly no better cure than a rigorous spiritual diet. It is a Ulysses who, when "made weak by time and fate," called up from the depths of his spirit the will "to strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield." There is for the individual, if he will only see it that way, an end that is ineluctable. Everyone, some time or other, may see the veil drawn over his expectations. That is the process in life that should never be accepted as final. There is always some measure of fulfillment in store. The fact of belief itself is the most vital of all sparks in the pulse of life. It is the presence of the soul that makes belief possible, and there is nothing that should be given away in exchange for a soul. In every phase of human endeavor when things go wrong the reason can be traced to "the ungodly wills and affections of sinful men." The Bishop of Ripon told the people of Britain that "the one really good and perfect gift" of the Great War was a new revelation of man's capacity for moral greatness and of the conditions "under which his true self blossoms out." There was a hope of a new world after the war. That hope was never translated into action because reconstruction instead of regeneration became the cry. Hence the post-war world emerged into something in some particulars resembling chaos when it had the opportunity of epochs to face the way of Christ again. Few indeed were the prophets of the time who told the peoples to "seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."

The world is full of theorists about what must be done for economic and fiscal salvation. Some of these undergo kaleidoscopic changes in their viewpoints, which indicate, not alone a poor judgment, but a fluctuating mentality. That is the proof that theories are the least stable part of a man's work. It is the same with theories respecting religion, for they can have character and power only when put to the actual test. In all cases the worth of theory depends on its correspondence to experience. It is significant of the impels as the manual of Christian doctrine that they do not deal with theories. Their purpose is to record facts and to manifest a Person, to impose the duty of obedience to Him. There is no finality in religious theory because the Central Figure of it is infinitely above the measures not only of mankind but of time and space as well. It is the soul that dictates those actions which make for a life after the pattern of Divinity; it is the soul that can come into contact with ever-growing manifestations of the transcendent power and love of the Eternal.

No theory of life is worth while until put to the test. That is peculiarly the case with morals, the highest expression of which must be based on religion. The theorist, if he is genuinely sincere, must vindicate his sincerity. He must test what he professes in his own conduct. The application must be faithful in every circumstance. It is by that process that, in Christianity, he who makes acts the test of faith discovers more and more of the worth of what he believes as an aid to meet the demands of duty and as a power in encountering all difficulties. One who does this has the doctrine of Eternity in his heart. By converting his theories into action he has made them convictions. The theories give place to the facts of actual experience, facts so impressive that they may be no more denied than the fact of existence itself. That is how theory receives the endorsement of life. Were it possible on the religious plane to bring about this conviction throughout humanity as a whole then there would be a new world. The peoples then would, in the words of Alfred Noyes:

Attempt new heights—bring even their dreams to birth;
Build us that better world, O, not diminished
By one true splendor that they planned on earth.

And that's not done by sword, or tongue or pen—
There's but one way—God make us better men!

Salvation from selfishness is won in the processes of the soul, is won by acknowledgment of Infinite Love, by appreciation that no revolution of thought as to moral conceptions may be achieved unless first those who would engineer it have led a revolution against themselves. The missing factor in all life that has its unhappiness in regeneration power. Men talk of revolution against existing conditions, but the only revolution is the one that Christ preached, a revolution in men's hearts, and with it "all these things shall be added unto you." It is that revolution that gives serenity of soul; it develops an atmosphere of love which makes all the difference in life; it promotes an ever fresh stimulus for a more perfect trust in and obedience to the All Highest. His will is inexhaustible in its fire and purity. It is forever a steady flame, ready to rekindle in the hearts of men those ideals of faith and immortality which became a part of the Divine records during the Eternal's sojourn on earth as a redemptive inspiration to humanity of all subsequent ages and climes.

BALLAD OPERAS

Victorians are only fortunate at long intervals to hear the spoken word, to see the living actresses and actors on the stage and to enjoy productions in which they can become in rapport with sentient characters. There is a vast difference in the mechanized production of the voice and voices heard from those singing in flesh and blood before the footlights. In one, interest must be in a measure detached; in the other, it is warm, vital and sympathetic.

Victorians will have the opportunity of seeing productions in the flesh of two eighteenth century ballad operas which were first played at Covent Garden over 150 years ago. They are ballads which revive an age when gaiety and gallantry held the fancy, when wit and satire marked stage productions, when there was buoyancy in comedy that dovetailed with the popular taste and when there was just as sweet melody as there is today. It was G. Marston Haddock, of Leeds, who brought such ballad operas as "Love in a Village" and "The Farmer" to light after they had lain on dusty shelves for over 150 years. It is to present them at the Empire Theatre here, and the fact that in 1927 their reproduction delighted London audiences should be their passport to success in this community.

These operas are redolent of the England of the eighteenth century, when music and dancing and innocent fun-making were all the vogue. They are symbols, too, of the traditions of the time. In San Francisco, the English Opera Players had capacity audiences. Mr. Haddock himself plays leading roles in each of the productions to be staged here, and his training, beginning at nine years old in the choir of Westminster Abbey and for six years under Sir Frederick Bridge, with his experience as an actor and producer ensure him and his company a hearty welcome during their three days' visit to Victoria.

MR. W. W. DUNCAN

Saanich municipal life and that district in all sense loses a highly-respected resident in the death of Mr. W. W. Duncan. The loss will be felt especially by the Conservative ranks in the municipality, because Mr. Duncan was a staunch and unwavering adherent to that cause in politics. His keen and practical interest in fruit growing and co-operative marketing plans were of high value to the agricultural interests of the peninsula, and in this respect, as well as in so many others, he will be keenly missed. He was well liked by all who knew him, and very wide sympathy will go out to his widow and children and other members of his family.

We should give as we would receive, cheerfully and without hesitation; for there is no grace in a benefit that sticks to the fingers.—Seneca.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

I wish you all sorts of prosperity, with a little more ease.—Le Mas.
There's a divinity that shapes our ends; rough-hew them how we will.—Shakespeare.

We remember reading a "History of Our Own Times" by a more or less eminent British author. That history of other times than ours was quite interesting, but it was almost ancient history when we read it, and not nearly as entralling as the records of current events published daily in the newspapers. For we are living in stirring times and strange things are happening in many parts of the world. When we scanned somewhat hastily this morning a batch of newspapers, we saw in one paper a dispatch saying that one Ian Mackenzie had announced that the Liberal Party would save Canada.

That was a rather alarming announcement, for we had never dreamt that Canada was in such a bad way that she was in need of either a savior or salvation. It is, of course, current knowledge that there are many people in Canada in desperate need of assistance through difficult circumstances; but in comparison with the people of most other countries the people of Canada are not so very badly situated. In some sections of Canada the land has not yielded bountiful harvests. In other sections of Canada there is a lack of employment. But the Federal government has made provision for carrying the unfortunate farmers and the destitute unemployed through hard times—and it appears to be a fact that there has been no actual suffering.

As for the matter of the salvation of Canada, we saw a dispatch in The Toronto Globe which contained very cheering news. The Globe was a Liberal newspaper years and years before Mr. Ian Mackenzie was born, and a considerable number of years before Mr. Ian Mackenzie was directed by Providence to cross the water and assist in saving Canada. The dispatch to The Toronto Liberal paper was dated from Ottawa and stated that Canadian trade had gone up $140,000,000 during the past year. In another paper we read a dispatch stating that the revenue of the Dominion was increasing at such a rate that the Finance Minister might be in a position to declare in his next budget that Canada had balanced her accounts for the current year.

When the fact is remembered that the drafts upon the Canadian treasury have been abnormally heavy an account of liberal assistance to practically bankrupt provinces and railway deficits, the truth appears to be that the country will achieve salvation without the assistance of the Liberal Party or its talkative deputy leader, Mr. Ian Mackenzie, at present of Vancouver.

It has been said that comparisons are odious, but comparisons are sometimes quite interesting, and often contain some comfort. Mr. Ian Mackenzie and his colleague in politics and economics, Mr. Gerry McGeer, have been in a state of alarm about the future of Canada for some time. In fact, both the eminent politicians and economists declared a few months ago that Canada was in dire peril and could be saved only by the adoption of heroic methods. Mr. Mackenzie, in one of the most vehement and unparliamentary of speeches, bellowed that the Dominion Government was doing nothing to relieve the depression and create prosperity, while the government of the United States had adopted a National Recovery Act and was on the high road to prosperity.

Mr. McGeer had a plan up his sleeve which beat all the plans of the ordinary professors and brain trusters to what a late Mr. Roosevelt called a fizzle. He laid his magical plan before the British Columbia Legislative in a speech which for longevity beat all the Hon. Ian's speeches to anger Mr. McGeer. The government rejected the McGeer magical plan. But a true Irishman never knows when he is beaten either in a speech or a fight. Mr. McGeer carried his plan East and outlined it to a parliamentary committee, to a member of the United States Senate and to boards of trade and other bodies which may know something about business and economics. In every case the plan was rejected, although a journalistic agent of the planner said it would be submitted to the United States Congress at its next session. The McGeer Social Credit Plan was pronounced to be either a dream or a bubble.

There is no doubt at all that it is a fortunate thing for Canada that the government could not be stamped down attempting any such daring and doubtful political and economic experiments as those recommended by the United States Brain Trust and adopted by President Roosevelt. The temptation may have been strong, but the Prime Minister of Canada thrust aside the temple. The government of the United States has spent ten billions of dollars and has incurred a deficit of five billions or dollars in an attempt to buy prosperity. Canada and Great Britain are the only nations of the world today in which business is steadily improving and which appear to be approaching the condition known as normal and contain a promise of actual prosperity. In neither of those nations are the people seething with passions which may culminate in serious disturbances.

A Working Mother's Prayer

By EDNA JACQUES

(A friend of Sunshine Camp Sooke, which has given scores of tired mothers and underprivileged children holidays this Summer, has asked for this poem by Edna Jacques to be run in connection with the closing of the camp this weekend.)

God keep her safe, she is so small to leave
In empty rooms, to fret and watch
And grieve.

With make-believe and dolls to play,
It is too cold to let her out today,
And I have need to earn our daily bread.

And hold my job, that we may still be fed.

Oh, give Thine angels charge . . .
A little one
Who left us here before her play was done.

She might be glad to come to earth once more,
And play with blocks upon a sunny floor.

And dress her dolls and play her favorite game,
And keep her company until I came.

And when it's warm and they can go outside
Let them go out along the pavements wide
Down to the park to swing and feed
And swan.

And for our four-leaf clover on the lawn;
And help her watch at corners of the street,
Those buses are so swift . . . for little feet.

I shall not mind the hours if I know
Someone is there, wherever she might go.

Holding her hands before her childish face,
Walking with her along a dangerous place;
And when I turn the corner

Sally Luns as Usual

In Lilliput Alley

By DORA KITTO

Nearly two centuries ago an elderly and benevolent-looking gentleman, the Hon. Mr. Richard Nash, who had come to live in the city in 1794, was the social director and master of ceremonies in the life of the ancient city and particularly his interest circled about the Pump Room, with its elegant and invalid patrons. In the zenith of his fame "Beau" Nash was known to travel in the greatest state. See him now, preceded by an outrider, on his way to Tunbridge, his chariot drawn by six grey horses, footmen in attendance, and French horns a-blowing! Kindly, benevolent Mr. Nash, who took such care of the morals of young girls and spent so lavishly when he led the social life of his adopted city! It is sad to think that he is dead, lacking the charity that he had dispensed so generously.

When any catering was to be undertaken which involved his consideration, he would be certain to enter the low doorway of No. 4—a little, recently-opened shop with small square window panes and a Chippendale fanlight over the door. An enticing smell of baking emanated from the shop, which—with the house behind it—had been erected between the momentous years 1743 and 1745. Here lived Mistress Sally Lun. Industrious! she baked her attractive delicacies in the brick oven below the shop, and in her earlier days would start out, morning and evening, with her wares in a basket covered with a white cloth. When Sally became a popular figure she gave up this method, for her little shop was frequented by the age and youth of Bath, bent upon taking refreshment—which would be certain to include the notorious and expensive cakes known as Sally Luns. Could anything be more delicious and appetizing, especially when thickly buttered? No wonder "Beau" Nash ordered them for local festivities and discussed his plans for a coming party with the friendly, practical Sally!

When the business had become a flourishing one, Sally sold it to a baker called Dalmer, who sent the famous cakes round the town in a delivery van.

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

(From The Daily British Colonist of September 2, 1884.)

Steamship Gardiner—The steamship Gardiner passed satisfactory inspection yesterday week to Nanaimo. Before leaving, a preliminary trial was made of the machinery with steam, under the supervision of Mr. Visser, steamboat inspector.

Accident Occurs—Yesterday afternoon an Indian was run over by a grocer's cart. He was immediately conveyed to the Royal Jubilee Hospital, where examination, it was found, he was badly injured. The cart was driven by a man named John. The cart was a very old one and was in a very bad state of repair. The accident was a very serious one and the driver was held responsible.

New Bank Bill—The new $5 bill of the Bank of British North America, which were described in this paper some time ago, were put into circulation here yesterday. The face of the bill is a bright blue, with the word "Five" on a light yellow ground across the surface. The vignette is a very good one, and the bill is a very good one. The bill is a very good one.

Wires Down—The extremely high wind yesterday brought the wires down, and consequently there is a dearth of foreign news in today's edition. Linesmen are expected to repair the damages by tonight.

barrows. Eventually, he retired upon the profits of his business. Long after Sally and "Beau" Nash and all the people of their day had passed from the stage of life, the little shop continued as a bake-house and grocery shop, only it was becoming more and more dilapidated, and early in the present century was a poor tenement dwelling. Then someone conceived the idea of restoring the historical abode and in 1933, workmen were set to pull down, excavate and rebuild. In doing, they discovered two fine hearths of Tudor design, which had been bricked up; a secret cupboard, and other interesting details. Should we visit the ancient city of Bath, it might be worth our while to look for No. 4, Lilliput Alley (North Parade Passage), partly out of curiosity and partly because the little shop had been reopened for business and Sally Luns made after the original recipe may still be purchased.

THE PROBLEM OF WAR

Sir—On August 9 you published a letter from Mr. Crisford critical of our peace paper, asking how many participants bothered to analyse the emotion of any native Indian witness. "Shall we, accepting the heritage from our ancestors, announce to the world that our part hereafter must be that of the most pitiful of creatures, a drivelling, whining ingrate?"

The League of Nations Society took part in this parade, while not sponsoring all that was said; in fact, having received advance assurance that no political propaganda would be intermixed with the anti-war demonstration, also that there would be no fight in any circumstances resolution put forward.

"No more war" is not possible of realization without some substitute. Mr. Lloyd, in his article of August 19, has suggested an international police; Mr. Haldane has long ago suggested the airplane as the logical weapon for such a body, and Lord Allen has gone further in suggesting international control of civil and military aviation. As he offers this plan for immediate adoption, his reference is doubtless to the League of Nations, for it would require much time to create another international body capable of developing such an undertaking.

Non-resistance does not mean the end of war. In fact, it may mean the worst of all wars, one of extermination and slavery. Suppose a country, like Cincinatti of old, would leave the plough in the field and rush to drive off the invaders—as the Indians tried to drive us off—suppose we failed, died, and the country was given over to fire and sword. Inconceivable! But the inconceivable has often come to pass. Would that be a better issue than attempting to settle the matter in advance in a congress of the world.

The marching behind bands of music and the glory and flag-waving have hitherto been largely confined to the devotees of war, who, in the few instances where they have been suggested, have been largely confined to the devotees of war. It may not be amiss now to begin to organize such demonstrations against war, although many of the participants may have had vague notions of the meaning of the word. Now I was at Sooke last Sunday, and on Monday I remarked to a neighbor of ours, who has a Summer home there, about the great need of improvement to this road, saying, "I would not like to drive that way regularly, meeting cars coming around those sharp turns, and if ever the West Coast road is built there will be need of some immediate improvement when any volume of traffic is let loose that way, or it is more dangerous than the Malahat ever was. Then there will have to be another big layout and expense, with the usual delay till many had been killed."

WORK ON ISLAND ROAD

Sir—I see it has been suggested that a request should be made to the Government to spend more money on the Malahat, as part of their works programme. Now I was at Sooke last Sunday, and on Monday I remarked to a neighbor of ours, who has a Summer home there, about the great need of improvement to this road, saying, "I would not like to drive that way regularly, meeting cars coming around those sharp turns, and if ever the West Coast road is built there will be need of some immediate improvement when any volume of traffic is let loose that way, or it is more dangerous than the Malahat ever was. Then there will have to be another big layout and expense, with the usual delay till many had been killed."

A party I saw in the city last week was remarking that we had more cars than any city of its size he had visited, yet we had not the works of handling the traffic of other cities. Yes, but what have we here in the way of roads for these cars. Just Saanich, Metochin and the Malahat routes to choose from. Coast cities are usually deficient in the number of roads to choose from, owing to the water, but in the midland parts of many cities in England, and other countries, you can find as many roads as there are days in the week, to choose from. Therefore the West Coast road needs to be built to give the citizens a chance of scenery, and as soon as possible, if the tourist trade is to be encouraged.

I have heard a few people say in speaking of the Malahat that a man is no driver at all if he complains of that road now, seeing the immense improvement that have been made there this last few years. You don't hear of those accidents now like there used to be, but no one could recommend Sooke Road to strangers. Again, what about Memorial Avenue, and the long talked-of improvements to be made there. I see there is a meeting to be called in the City Hall in September, relating to this road, and to make it worthy of the name it is to carry. Then surely if there is anything to be done in this way they may see their way to devote some of the money to this purpose, not leave it all to the public and what the late General Clarke did.

I say myself, and others say the same, we have Dr. Tolmie and the late Government to thank for the way they have fixed up the East and West Saanich, and many other roads around here, when in power; instead of letting most of our taxes and money be spent on the Mainland, as had been the custom in previous years.

J. MULLARD,

LIFEBOAT ASSOCIATION

Sir—This letter is No. 18 of the series which is being issued with the authority of the directors of the Vancouver Island Lifeboat Association. The last letter contained notes on the builds and designs of shore-boats.

For many weeks I have been waiting for space to give a wonderful story of good team and heroic rescue work of Croner, on the east coast of England, in December, 1933. Here are the extracts from the Lifeboat of February last:

"Of the seven lifeboats launched on December 13, five were on the Norfolk coast—the two Croner, Dickensy, Sheringham, Great Yarmouth and Gorleston; one at Aldborough on Suffolk coast, and one at Bridlington on Yorkshire coast.

"The first call reached Croner at 4 a.m. A vessel was burning flames two miles south of Halesborough coast guard station, about eleven miles from Croner. A strong gale was blowing. The sea was very heavy and increasing. The weather was very cold. The motor-lifeboat H. F. Bailey was launched at 4.30 a.m., and, fighting against the gale, reached the vessel two hours later. She was the barge Glenway, with three men on board. She had been driven ashore, and was lying in such shallow water that it was impossible for the lifeboat to get alongside. Two attempts were made and the lifeboat herself was grounded. The coxswain then hauled off and stood by until, with the ebbing tide, the vessel was lying dry and there was no further danger to her crew. It was then 8 a.m. As it was impossible with the gale blowing, to rescue the lifeboat at Croner, the coxswain went on down the coast to Gorleston, another seventeen miles. The lifeboat was continually swept by heavy seas. Her crew were wet through and very cold. As she passed the coast guard station at Felling the coxswain signalled to find out if there was any other call for the lifeboat at Croner, but the weather was so bad that signals could not be read, and the lifeboat continued on her way down the coast.

"Meanwhile, just before 8 a.m., another barge, the Sepoy, of Dover, with two men aboard, had been driven ashore at Croner. She had been at anchor, and had been kept under observation all night (13th) by the Croner coast guard. Her anchor light had been burning clearly, but no signal of distress had been seen during the night. This report of an heroic rescue will be continued in the next letter.

Club Will Mark Quarter Century

The Women's Canadian Club will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary with a tea at the Empress Hotel on Tuesday, September 11. The tea, which will resume the club's service, will begin at 3.45 o'clock, and the executive hopes there will be a good representation of members.

"My wife is prolonging her visit. I need her at home, but it seems useless to write suggesting that she return." "Get one of the neighbors to suggest it, my boy."

C.C.F. RE-ELECT W. A. PRITCHARD

Is Chosen for Second Term as Head of Associated Clubs

VANCOUVER, Sept. 1 (CP).—William A. Pritchard was elected president of the Associated C.C.F. Clubs of British Columbia for a second term at the closing session of the organization's convention here today.

Other officers elected are: Vice-president, Grant McNeil, West Vancouver; second vice-president, Arnold Webster, Vancouver; secretary, A. Dawson Gordon, (re-elected), Vancouver; and treasurer, W. E. Turner, Grandview.

SEKS CONVENTION
 Kamloops requested the convention of the organization for 1935, and the matter was referred to the incoming executive of the Affiliated Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

Merging of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, British Columbia branch, and the Socialist Party of Canada, which was urged in a resolution at the convention of the Associated Clubs on Saturday, will be decided upon at a session of the Affiliated C.C.F. Clubs, Sunday.

In referring to the proposed merger on Saturday, President Pritchard remarked that it was one of the soundest moves the party could make. "The movement in the rest of Canada looks to British Columbia for leadership in matters of this kind," he said.

LEADER SPEAKS
 Rev. Robert Connell, leader of the Opposition in the British Columbia Legislature and a delegate from Victoria to the convention, emphasized the importance of keeping alive the cultural part of the movement.

A resolution passed at the convention stated that persons holding public office cannot be included on the executive. The initiative referendum and recall proposal was unanimously lost on the grounds that it was obsolete and unconstitutional.

A committee, to be known as the Co-operative Commonwealth Co-operatives, to conduct education in the various C.C.F. clubs of the province, in accord with the party principle, was elected.

Hostile Feeling in European Countries Keeps Peace at Bay

Rev. G. A. Reynolds, Returned From World Baptist Congress, Gives Impressions of Men and Affairs in Germany and England

EUROPE, a group of countries suspicious and envious, one of the other; Germany embittered against France; France embittered against Germany; and everybody watching everybody else. This is the general impression of political Europe that Rev. G. A. Reynolds, pastor of First Baptist Church, Victoria, carried away with him when he left the Old World about a fortnight ago to return to Canada after attending the World's Baptist Congress held in Berlin from August 4 to 10.

But the picture is by no means entirely pessimistic. Observing keenly every aspect of German life during the last days he spent in Berlin, he found many things to admire and extol among the Germans—their cleanliness, their thrift, their intelligence, and determination won his respect if not his complete admiration.

"Not a city in Europe is as clean as Berlin; London is filthy by comparison," said Mr. Reynolds. "It would appear that Hitler is doing much for Germany. The organization apparent on all sides is marvelous. The whole country is in uniform, uniforms of every kind—green shirts, blue shirts, brown, black, and various other kinds. I don't know what they all stand for, but uniforms are to be found on every hand," he recalled. Watching these uniforms folk he noticed that they all seemed to carry dispatch cases, and, although he never definitely discovered what these bags contained, he surmised that they must be something in the nature of Government documents, as his hotel was in the Wilhelmstrasse, quite near the Parliament Buildings, and these people were probably either going to or from the Reich.

THE CONGRESS
 At the world's Baptist Congress six-hundred countries were represented and about ten thousand delegates. Between two and three thousand registered delegates were present. Nearly all the Christianized countries of the world were represented. Russia, although unable for diplomatic reasons to send delegates, sent greetings indirectly through Poland and Germany.

"To my own amazement I discovered that we are the largest Protestant body in the world. In the United States alone there are ten million Baptists," Mr. Reynolds noted, adding with a smile that the only way he could account for the fact that Norway was not represented was that the Norwegian people are the strongest following in this denomination of any part of Canada was that they were wiser than any other part of the Dominion.

Buildings Closed—With the exception of the Provincial Museum, which will be open all day, offices at the Legislative Buildings will be closed on Monday, in observance of the Labor Day holiday.

Meeting Postponed—The meeting of Ward Four Sanitary Ratepayers' Association, which was to have been held next Wednesday night, has been postponed until Wednesday, September 12.

Fractured Arm—John Keir, 1340 George Street, received a fractured right arm when he fell in the 700 block, Fort Street, yesterday. He was removed in the C. & C. ambulance to St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment.

To Attend Convention—James F. Hough, delegate representing the Victoria Typographical Union No. 201, will leave tomorrow for Chicago to attend the seventy-eighth convention of the International Typographical Union, which will be composed of official delegates from all parts of the Dominion and the United States. The convention is scheduled to open next Saturday.

Invited to Join—L. R. Andrews, who was closely identified with the British Columbia lumber trade extension in Australia, New Zealand and at other points, has been invited to join the forthcoming lumber mission to South Africa. He learned here yesterday. Major Andrews, in town for the week-end, said he will be forced to decline the invitation, due to pressure of private business in Vancouver.

Special Meeting—Mayor David Leeming has called a special meeting of the city council for Tuesday, September 4, at 2 p.m., for the purpose of discussing the question of securing a free port area in or near Victoria. Those expected to attend the meeting are the Mayor, Aldermen John Worthington, Alderman C. J. D. Hunter, Reeve William Crouch, Reeve R. W. Mayhew and Reeve Alexander Lockley.

Slightly Injured—When he was struck down by a motor car at the intersection of Cormorant and Douglas Streets yesterday, Thomas Campbell, 416 Mason Street, suffered a cut over his right eye. He was taken to police headquarters, where he was attended by Dr. Denon Holmes. According to a police report, the driver of the motor car, Alex Marshall, 1275 Balmoral Road.

community bath is still used. Mr. Reynolds actually witnessed the installation of electric light for the first time in homes in a portion of Northern London. "Emphatically, not I would not like to live in England again," he said in answer to a question.

RELIQS RELATE EARLY HISTORY

Coins and Buttons Found in Old Fort Niagara Barracks

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont.—Old Niagara Camp on the Canadian side of the Niagara River, is giving up its treasures of historical relics.

These relics, discovered by the falling of plaster from the ceiling of Butlers Barracks, perhaps bring modern occurrences nearer to the affairs of 100 to 150 years ago when Imperial soldiers guarded Upper Canada. The Barracks is used at the present time as a store-room for the Ordnance Corps, of which Sgt. Major Jennings is in charge. He decided to pull the rest of the plaster from the great oak beams, and a shower of old coins, buttons and cartridges greeted him.

REGIMENTAL LORE
 The collection on investigation was found to hold at least one memento from each regiment ever stationed at the old war zone. An old, odd-shaped knife; an old button-stick; musket balls; the size of a small five-cent piece; a one-pound cannon ball; a unique key; a Hindustani Peninsula helmet; a flattened old lead bullet; and a number of old helmet facings and fittings.

Among the coins, which are mostly copper and vary in dates from 1745 to 1844, are a number of George II and George III mintage. There is also a small Spanish piece, the size of a small five-cent piece, inscribed 1796, Carlos 4; a copper commemorative of Waterloo, 1812-13-14; a copper coin with the words "Colonies and Commerce Wellington" on it; and one which is probably the most unique, a copper coin inscribed "1813 Trade and Navigation Preferable to Paper." This has a ship on one side.

OLD-TIME COATS
 The regimental buttons are some of those used on uniforms worn by soldiers of the 15th Foot (East Yorkshire) 37th, 70th (Sussex), 68th, Shropshire Infantry, 70th, 66th, the King's Dragoon Guards, 76th, Duke of Wellington West Riding Yorkshire.

The building was one of the first built in military occupation days at Niagara, and dates back to 1790. It was moved probably back from the brow of the hill near St. George's, after the burning of Niagara by the American army. As a barracks it has not been used since 1865, when it was occupied by the Queen's Own Regiment, during the Fenian invasion.

It is thought the relics had fallen from the pockets of soldiers bunked on the upper floor and become lodged in the wide cracks of the floor. The old oak to be in the perfect state of preservation. They are all hand-hewn.

Noted War Nurse Dead in Ontario

THOROLD, Ont., Sept. 1 (CP).—Nurse Ina Isabelle Grenville, one of the most noted of Canada's war nurses, died here today, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Grenville.

A graduate of Thorold public and high schools, she went overseas in 1915 as the first Canadian nurse, serving at Malta during the Gallipoli campaign, and in France.

A young man was pleading for the hand of the big business man's daughter. "I would like you to write poetry," said her father, thoughtfully. "Do you make a living at it?" "Well," the young author modestly replied, "I write enough to keep the wolf from the door." "Hm," said father, sourly, "you read it to the wolf, then?"

Weddings

HUTCHISON-WALLACE
A pretty wedding took place on Friday evening at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. T. H. McAllister, Qu'Appelle Street, when Edith Isabelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wallace, of Port Alberni, became the bride of Mr. Robert Hutchison, Jr., son of Mr. R. Hutchison, Ellice Street. The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. James Laird, wore a becoming gown of heavy white crepe with a turban to match, and was attended by Miss Mary Foster, in powder blue crepe. The corsage bouquets were of bridal roses and carnations. Mr. A. McPhee was best man. A reception was held at the home of the groom's father, the supper table being centred with a three-tier wedding cake. The bride and groom left on the midnight boat to spend their honeymoon in the Sound cities, and will make their home at Port Alberni.

BRADLEY-FARMER
Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Farmer, 635 Superior Street, yesterday announced the marriage of their only daughter, Alice Winifred, to Mr. Leslie Furness Bradley, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Bradley, of this city. The marriage was solemnized quietly at Christ Church Cathedral, by Very Rev. C. S. Quinlan, Dean of Columbia. On their return from a short visit to the Mainland, the young couple will make their home in Victoria.

Gladys Glad On Beauty

Historians claim that the Titan-haird, violent-tempered Queen Elizabeth of England put a strict ban on the use of cosmetics when she came into power. Elizabeth refused to allow the English belles to enhance their charms with artificial aids. Yet she herself used her own methods of preserving the loveliness of her complexion. Elizabeth always washed her face daily with a mixture of eggs, wine and milk. And she considered it most excellent as a complexion beautifier.

Personally, however, I really don't think that good Queen Bess needed the wine and milk in that mixture. Of course, you know as well as I that both wine and milk have astringent properties. But an egg alone is as excellent a skin beautifier as anyone could desire. And a properly administered egg mask can do a great deal to keep a girl's skin looking smooth and fine-textured during the hot summer months.

Judging from my recent mail, however, there seem to be quite a few girls who are ignorant of the proper method of administering an egg mask. They do not know whether to use the white of the egg or the yolk. And they are dubious as to the most effective method of applying and removing the pack.

Personally, I have found that the egg mask is most effective when both the white and the yolk of the egg are used. Before applying the pack, the skin should be thoroughly cleansed with soap and water, and then with cleansing cream. If the skin is very dry, a thin film of cream may be permitted to remain on it under the mask. The white of an egg should then be beaten to stiffness, and applied thickly over the entire face. When this first application has dried, a second application of the egg white should be allowed to dry thoroughly. This second application should be painted over it.

This egg mask should be permitted to remain on the face for about an hour. Then, when thoroughly dry, it can be easily removed with tepid water and a soft cloth. If the mask seems drying to the skin, a bit of cold cream may be used after its removal. Try this mask, and I'm sure you'll find it most helpful in keeping your skin clear, soft and fine-textured during the hot summer months.

"And how do you like your new home, dear?"
"Charming! I simply love the loggia."
"I say! Isn't your hubby jealous?"

MISS ILA BROWN

WHO is to succeed Miss A. T. Martin as superintendent of the United Church of Canada and School on Cormorant Street, Miss Brown arrived recently from Toronto, where she has been enjoying a furlough after an extended period of service in community mission work, for the United Church, at Sault Ste. Marie and Copper Cliff, Ontario. A Toronto girl, she received her training at the famous United Church training centre in that city, and this is her first experience with work of the kind in Western Canada. Miss Martin, whom she succeeds, retired from office at the end of August, and will leave for Ontario, where she will live in the future.

Anniversary Is Happily Celebrated

Many friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Y. McCarter called on them at the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. A. McCarter, on the occasion of their sixtieth wedding anniversary on Friday to offer congratulations, and, in addition to these personally-conveyed good wishes, many written messages and letters were received. The reception rooms held a profusion of gorgeous flowers, the gifts of friends, among those who remembered them in this way being the Mayor and aldermen of the city and the former Postmaster and Mrs. Bishop.

The tea table, with its cloth of Irish lace, was charmingly arranged with flowers, orchid and white sweet sultan and pink rosebuds in silver vases. Pink candles in silver scones completed the pretty effect.

Assisting the hostess with the serving were Mrs. William McCarter (a cousin), Mrs. E. C. Waites, of Seattle (a granddaughter); Mrs. E. L. Waites, Mrs. Sydney S. Barker, Mrs. W. Edmund McKennie, Mrs. O. Anderson, Mrs. J. Abbott, of Vancouver; Miss A. Hodge and Mrs. E. J. Read.

Letters of congratulations were received from the Mayor and aldermen of the city and Mr. Joseph E. Wilson.

Those present were Mrs. C. R. D. Ferril, Mr. and Mrs. T. Welch, Mr. John Fullerton, Miss Eugene St. Beaver, Mr. and Mrs. John Allison, Miss I. Allan, Mr. James Allison, Mr. and Mrs. E. ### PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT

United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS (UP).—With a typical touch of whimsy, Heim has baptised "Natalie" one of his best models, an evening gown of white cotton organdie heavily embroidered with white flowers and leaves. "Natalie," you see, is the name of his concierge, and the material is evocative of the bedspreads usually to be seen in the best concierge lodges. When used for a dress, however, the stuff is strikingly lovely. Heim has designed two models in the same spirit as "Pie," the white-haired child of the last collection. Now that it has become a bit warm to wear black wool, no matter how light, he presents an ensemble of bumpy brown crepe, a dress and three-quarter coat on loose lines of heavy white pique that fastens with two large brown leather knobs; and of narrow pleating and a patent leather belt, over which goes a short wide coat of brilliant yellow linen with a small stand-up collar and a tiny band of patent leather around the hem.

ESQUIMALT BROWNIES
Brownies of the Esquimalt pack and their friends gathered on Friday for a picnic at Base Point. The morning was spent in swimming, and a fire was built on the beach and potatoes roasted as an extra attraction to the al fresco lunch. A Nature game and sporting events followed by another swim and supper brought a very happy day to a close.

"Messiah" to Be Sung by Massed Choir

Rehearsals for the massed choir presentation of the "Messiah" under the direction of Stanley Bulley, in Christ Church Cathedral on December 19, will commence next Friday, September 7, at 8:30 p.m., in the Memorial Hall, and every succeeding Friday at the same hour. Registration of members will be made from 8 until 8:30 p.m., after which time no attendances will be marked. Everyone must be in their place by 8:30, as rehearsals will commence on time. Application for membership may be made to Mr. Bulley, but none will be accepted after the first practice. It is hoped that all who intend to join will be present on September 7. Requests have been received from the public to listen to rehearsals, but this cannot be acceded to. The conductor requests each member to bring a copy of the "Messiah," Prout's Edition preferred (this may be obtained locally), also to bring a blue pencil.

Nine choirs of the city, together with many "unattached" singers, have signified their intention to take part. Edward Parsons has kindly accepted the position of accompanist, and Miss E. Brumpton that of registrar.

Orchestral rehearsals will commence on Monday, September 17, in the Memorial Hall, at 7:45 p.m.

MEETING ON TUESDAY

Dear Sir:—
I thought you would like to know that I have had most satisfactory results from Nu LIFE Dog Mixture. I have used less than a bottle on a seven-year-old wire-haired terrier who has been troubled with eczema all his life. I have tried many other remedies without result, but Nu LIFE has rid him of the trouble entirely. When I had used it years ago, my dog liked Nu LIFE and actually licked up any drops which may happen to drop on the floor.

Social and Personal Notes

Party at Lake Hill

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Clatworthy entertained at an enjoyable party during the week at their home, on York Avenue, Lake Hill, to celebrate their silver wedding. They were married on August 28, 1909, at the parish church of Broadclyst, Exeter, Devonshire, by the Rev. Hanly P. Scott. The evening was spent with cards and music, and the winners at the card tables were Mrs. E. Dikeman and Mr. R. Gray, Mr. V. Long, Mr. R. Squire, Mr. and Mrs. C. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. A. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. R. Renaud, Mr. and Mrs. J. Oliver, Mrs. Greig, Mrs. Swan, Mrs. Hine, Misses Squire, I. Campbell, H. Howell, J. Howell, D. Campbell, K. Gray, A. Clatworthy, A. Campbell, J. Campbell, Marilyn Gray, Mary Lou Renaud and Messrs. G. Mortimer, A. Clatworthy, C. Lowe, P. Russell, V. Long, W. Wright, P. Howell and W. Squire.

Delightful Tea

Mrs. Peter Wentworth Bell and Miss Ena Henderson were joint hostesses at a delightful tea, yesterday afternoon, at Mrs. Bell's home on Bowker Avenue, in honor of Miss Kathleen Brown, whose marriage will take place shortly. Michaelmas daisies and cosmos were used most effectively in the decoration of the rooms. Mrs. W. Ellis Brown and Mrs. W. A. Parrot presided at the lace-covered tea table, which was centered by a lovely bowl of pale pink gladioli and illuminated by tall white tapers. The guests were Mrs. W. Ellis Brown, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. C. Lauder, Mrs. Denis Hagar, Mrs. Clarence W. Gray, Mrs. J. Allan Fraser, Mrs. Edward J. G. Moore, Mrs. Robert Hamilton-Smith, Mrs. West and Misses Kathleen Brown, Patricia Brown, Joan French, Marjorie French, Dorothy Cameron, Vida Shandley, Gwendolyn Watkins, Gertrude Hill, Eileen D'Arcy, Eileen McPherson, Rena Fleming, Wilma Henderson, Audrey Tooley, Marjorie Waites, Gwendolyn Winsby, Jean Findlay and Dorothy Allan.

Supper Dance at Empress

There was a large crowd of dancers at the Empress Hotel supper dance in the Crystal ballroom last evening, and the tables with their decorations of flowers were particularly attractive. Among those who made reservations were Mr. D. Sheret and party of sixteen, Mr. McCreary with six, Mr. Chisholm with four, Miss Semmes with eight, Mr. Mallek, Mr. Keith J. Bollen, Major Rycroft, Mr. E. F. King, Mr. W. L. Howland, Mr. D. O'Neill, Commander and Mrs. Borrie, Mr. and Mrs. Thunders Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. P. Pickering, Mr. Hargrave and party of eight, Mr. McFarland and Mr. Everett Raynor.

Miscellaneous Shower

A miscellaneous shower was given by Mrs. Lane and Mrs. W. Gibson, at Mrs. Gibson's home, 2018 Jackson Street, in honor of Miss Hilda Cross, whose marriage takes place shortly. The gifts were delightfully arranged in a pink and blue hat box, the table being decorated in the same colors with a silver basket of pink and mauve asters and mauve candles. A buffet supper was served. The invited guests were: Mrs. Raper, Mrs. S. Peteh, Mrs. V. Hawkins, Mrs. E. Williams, Mrs. H. Gibson, Mrs. Mathers, Mrs. Cross, Mrs. T. Horne, Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Stenton, Mrs. W. Gibson and Misses Hilda Cross, Elsie Cross, Ida Gibson, Lorna Howard and Isobel Gibson.

What Today Means

"VIRGO"

If September 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a.m. to 12 noon, from 3 to 5 p.m. and from 8 to 10 p.m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a.m. from 1 to 3 p.m., and from 6 to 8 p.m.

It may prove advisable to select your companions with care on this date, if you wish to avoid running the chance of being bored. Some very stupid birds are gaily plumed, so it might be wise not to judge a person's mentality by external appearances.

Care should be exercised in the selection of topics for conversation on this date. Some subjects might prove highly embarrassing to one of your listeners-in and you would not intentionally want to hurt a friend's feelings. Religion and politics are two themes that it might be wise to keep off.

Be cautious regarding money, especially in the way you carry it. A loss may be sustained if it is carelessly handled, or left laying around loose. It might prove advisable, in social contacts, to avoid anything that might be construed as an ostentatious display of personal belongings. Modesty in both dress, as well as demeanor will prevent unpleasant comment. Married and engaged couples should be as discreet as possible in their conversation. Those in love should find this date full of lucky happenings for them.

If September 2 is your birthday and you are a woman, it should prove a very happy day for you, full of pleasant surprises. You are blessed with an eye for beauty and a highly appreciative sense for things of artistic worth. Your placid disposition and eagerness to please should win you many friends, both in business and socially. Any line of business requiring the application of a skillful touch to things of beauty should prove a splendid field for one of your abilities. Love will mean a great deal to you and marriage should provide a great sufficiency.

The child born on September 2 is as a rule, when it becomes old enough to display personal traits of character, of an unusually happy, carefree disposition and a joy to both parents and friends.

If a man and September 2 is your natal day, you require harmonious surroundings to enable you to do your best work. Designing, painting, planning or writing offer unlimited opportunities to a man possessing your technique, which is decidedly original. Of a deeply affectionate nature, you crave affection and will be happiest if you have a home of your own.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 3

"VIRGO"

If September 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., and from 8:30 to 10:30 p.m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m., and from 10:30 until midnight.

The day will be rife with a holiday spirit, with the result that only business catering to the public appetite and amusement can expect to make money. It might be advisable, should you go to places where there is a likelihood of getting in large crowds, to make up your mind in advance you will let nothing ruffle your temper. You may encounter crude and rude people during the day whom it will prove wise to ignore, as well as their antics. You may encounter a friend, who, having no responsibilities, either in the way of family or financial matters, may try to tempt you to show sufficient strength of character not to allow yourself to be led into a foolish or reckless adventure. Social contacts should prove enjoyable on this date and this should be an excellent one on which to pay "dirty" calls. Married couples, as well as those engaged, might prevent discussion occurring of they do not allow social engagements to separate or cause each to go to a different place.

If a woman and September 3 is your natal day, you should receive a lot of attention on this date and enjoy yourself immensely. Financial matters may improve for you greatly, through an unexpected source. If you marry, be careful you do not do so for money, for that alone cannot buy love or happiness. If you select your mate for his real worth, you should be more than compensated by the devotion he will bestow. Work of a routine nature might prove best for one of your disposition. Positions requiring efficiency in filing, tabulating, or calculating might prove congenial.

The child born on September 3 is just as soon as it is old enough to understand, should be taught to consider the needs and desires of others before its own. This may prevent it developing selfishness, becoming self-centred.

If a man and September 3 is your birth anniversary, you should prove very successful, providing you do not allow a mercenary spirit to dominate your actions or influence the selection of your friends. If you practice being considerate in your dealings with family and friends, the joy you will experience will more than compensate any trouble that might necessitate.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4

"VIRGO"

If September 4 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p.m., and from 7:15 to 9:15 p.m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a.m., from 5:15 to 7:15 p.m., and from 9:15 to 11:15 p.m.

If you wish to use good judgment on this date, you will guard your speech carefully. Any form of expressed irritability may prove a very expensive luxury to indulge in, for it may be very costly in the long run. Business will probably show a sluggish reaction to the holiday period, which caused such a lapse of time in activity. However, as those engaged in courtship, indicating that some desirable deals will be completed in the very near future. Be very careful you do not answer to friend or stranger too abruptly, as personal feelings on this date may prove to be super-sensitive and a good many people may go around carrying chips on their shoulders. Engagements of the social nature may prove difficult to make, so it might be well to wait another twenty-four hours. If possible, before trying to make them. Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in courtship, may avoid trouble if each one will comply with any reasonable request the other one makes, without argument.

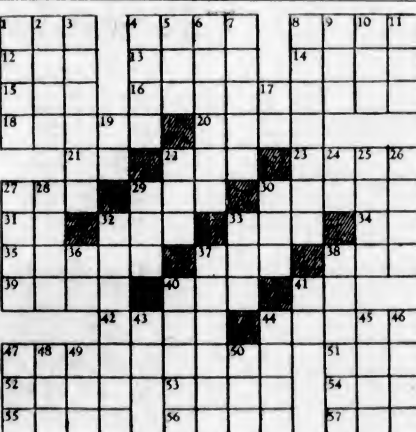

If a woman and September 4 is your natal day, you may receive either letters, visitors or phone calls which should brighten your day considerably. Your natural inclination to mix readily with people and make friends should prove a great asset in any line of business, bringing you into close contact with the buying public. As a saleswoman, in a smart dress or millinery shop or a book store, you should do well. If in a position to follow a profession, either the medical, legal or chemical professions should offer unlimited opportunities for one with your personality. Your love to entertain can be gratified, if, through marriage, you have your own home. Your husband should prove a source of much joy. If a child is born on September 4, when it grows up, it should prove very popular. Every educational advantage possible should be given this child, as it will probably take advantage of the opportunities offered it.

If a man, born on September 4, this should prove to be a very lucky day for you. It may prove advisable for you to always be very careful in writing either personal or business letters never to be indiscreet. You probably would be very successful in a professional career, although commercial life also offers you opportunities to make money.

The child born on September 4 is as a rule, when it becomes old enough to display personal traits of character, of an unusually happy, carefree disposition and a joy to both parents and friends.

If a man and September 4 is your natal day, you require harmonious surroundings to enable you to do your best work. Designing, painting, planning or writing offer unlimited opportunities to a man possessing your technique, which is decidedly original. Of a deeply affectionate nature, you crave affection and will be happiest if you have a home of your own.

Social Activities and Notes of Personal Interest

Cathedral Is Scene of Smart Evening Wedding

Miss Dorothy Cox and Mr. John E. Scruton Married—Largely Attended Reception Held at Home of Bride's Parents

Christ Church Cathedral was the scene of a pretty wedding last evening at 8 o'clock, when Very Rev. C. S. Quinlan, Dean of Columbia, united in matrimony Dorothy May Audley, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cox, 1131 Burdett Avenue, and Mr. John Ernest Scruton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scruton, of Royal Oak, V.I., and of London.

CHARMING BRIDE

Entering the church on the arm of her father, by whom she was given in marriage, the fair bride made a delightful picture in her wedding gown of rich ivory Duchesse satin, modelled with simplicity on Empire lines. The skirt was moulded to the figure as far as the hips, where it flared to fullness, touching the floor. A chic short coat was worn with tight effect across front, finishing with a small bow at the waist, the back flared to fullness touching the floor and extending to form a court train. The tight-fitting sleeves were pointed at the wrist. The long net hand-embroidered veil in coronet effect fell in soft folds to form a second train, finished off at the nape of the neck with orange blossoms, while gloves shoes completed her attire. She carried a sheaf of lilies and bridal roses.

BRIDAL ATTENDANTS

The bridesmaid was Miss Owen-dolen Cox, sister of the bride, charming in pink silk net with tight-fitting bodice, the flared skirt finished in three deep flounces, the sleeves consisting of three small frills to the elbow. She wore a large mauve, French-embroidered model hat, and mittens to match, and carried a sheaf of baby pink roses.

Gerry Miles and Joyce Anderson were sweet little flower girls, dressed alike in periwinkle blue satin, quaint Kate Greenaway frocks, with smart little Georgian caps of silver with flowers across the back. They carried small Colonial nosegays.

The groomsmen were Mr. Douglas Stephens, and Mr. Walter Miles, Mr. Lionel Cox and Mr. Eric Cox, acted as ushers.

Mr. Stanley Bulley, organist of the cathedral, rendered the wedding marches, and during the signing of the register contributed an organ solo.

RECEPTION HELD

After the ceremony a reception was held at the studio, Burdett Avenue, where Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Scruton received the guests. Mrs. Cox was wearing a becoming black satin dress with tight bodice effect and flared skirt, the bishop sleeves being opened up the centre with cream tucked chiffon. She wore a smart black felt hat and corsage of roses and sweet peas.

Mrs. Scruton wore a becoming dress of beige flowered silk net with hat en suite, and a corsage of pink bud roses.

A buffet supper was served, the table being centred with a three-tiered wedding cake. The floral decorations were beautiful and the presents were numerous.

A three-piece orchestra was in attendance, and Miss Dorothy Parsons was the soloist.

The bride and groom left by the midnight boat for the Mainland, the bride traveling in a smart suit of blue tulle with a long coney tie, and hat of grey and blue felt, with blue shoes and grey accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Scruton will make their home in Victoria.

PUPILS APPEAR IN PROGRAMME

Clever Acting by Children Wins Much Applause at Salt-spring Island

SALTSPRING, Sept. 1.—Crowded to capacity, the Central Settlement Hall, Salt-spring Island, was the scene of great enthusiasm last Monday evening, when the pupils of the Salt-spring Island School, under the direction of their teacher, Miss Elinor Macpherson, of Toronto, entertained the audience with a demonstration of the work they had accomplished in their seven weeks' training in dramatic art. The evening started with a comic radio skit delivered from the floor by Helen Moorhouse; Dorothy Mount, from the stage, acting as announcer. The baby of the class, six-year-old Sylvia Crofton, opened the programme with two cleverly-rendered readings, A. A. Milne's "Vespers" and "The Actress." This was followed by a splendid interpretation of the "Charcoal Man," a recitation by Gladys Winthrop. A well-merited reception was accorded the four little actors, Dorothy Mount, June Mitchell, Sylvia Crofton and Ormond Springford, in their finished performance of a comic little playlet, "The Lost Cake."

CHILDREN'S WORK

In the children's class, June Mitchell, Sylvia Crofton and O. Springford gave a beautiful demonstration of bodily expression, conveying, by a series of gestures, the emotions indignation, appeal, joy, sorrow, surprise, etc. Dorothy Moorhouse's graceful Grecian statue dance was one of the chief features of the evening and her interpretation of the reading, "At the Theatre," was excellently carried out. The following items were also well received, "The Lesson With the Pan," by Daisy Evans; "Orange's Polka," a monologue with musical accompaniment, and "In a Department Store," by Helen Moorhouse, and a short sketch, "Suppose," by Daisy Evans and Gladys Winthrop. The "Children's Minutes," readings in which both June Mitchell and O. Springford took part, was brought to a close with an old-fashioned minuet, charmingly danced.

MUSICAL ACCOMPANIMENT

The "Red Canoe," an attractive monologue, in costume, rendered to musical accompaniment by Betty Kingsbury, and, in contrast, a comic recitation by Edna Morris, entitled "Saying Goodbye to Lillian," were both greeted with prolonged applause and appreciation.

An interesting item was an exhibition of toe dancing, by June Mitchell and Sylvia Crofton. Each was presented with a bouquet at the conclusion of her turn.

Unfortunately, through illness, Bride Wilson was unable to be present and undertake her three contributions to the programme. The performance concluded with a short farce, "Two Funny People," by Betty Kingsbury and Edna Morris. Miss Bertha Ellis Dewey played for the class work and between the numbers.

Mrs. Macpherson was the recipient of a lovely bouquet at the close of the entertainment, and, by request, delighted the audience by giving two readings, "Lascas" and "Little Ballade," for which the musical accompaniments were played by her sister, Miss Dewey.

Refreshments were served after the fall of the curtain.

A delightful miscellaneous shower organized by the hostess, Mrs. Stuart Holmes, took place last Wednesday afternoon at Ganges, where Mrs. E. Walter kindly lent her home for the occasion. The shower was in honor of Miss Betty Seymour, who, for two years, has been on the nursing staff of the Gulf Islands Hospital, and whose marriage to Mr. Almer Beddis will take place in the middle of September in Vancouver. The lovely presents, which numbered over eighty, were placed in a five-foot model of a sailing ship with mast, flag, etc., complete. The model was made by Mrs. Stuart Holmes, Mrs. Stuart Smith and the Misses Lees, entirely of crinkled paper. On arrival, the bride-to-be was presented by Mrs. Frank Scott with a lovely bouquet of pale pink stocks, white roses and gypsophila. Mrs. Walter, Miss Sorbie, Miss Beddis, assisted by Mrs. L. D. Drummond, Misses Mary, Margaret and Hilary Purdy and Phyllis Beech, served tea. Following tea, the guest of honor, aided by Miss K. Lyon, opened and displayed the beautiful array of presents. Among those present were: Mrs. G. Borradaile, Mrs. Justice, Mrs. Clive Justice, Mrs. A. J. Eaton, Mrs. C. H. Popham, Mrs. Harvey, Mrs. St. Denis, Mrs. Mount, Miss Manson, Mrs. M. B. Gardner, Mrs. J. Akerman, Mrs. Charles Mackintosh, Misses D. and J. Justice, Mr. H. W. Bullock, and Mr. Almer Beddis.

Mrs. A. Emley and Miss Florence Mallett were joint hostesses last Saturday afternoon at the home of the former, "Stowe Lake Lodge," Beaver Point, when they entertained about twenty guests at a miscellaneous shower given by them in honor of Miss Evelyn Jackson, whose wedding to Mr. H. C. Cleaver will take place at Quamichan on September 1. The pretty decorations of the room in which the shower was held were carried out entirely in white and gold flowers and colored streamers mixed with the beautiful leaves of the Oregon grape. Above the door was a large horseshoe made of golden glow and asters. For the arrangement of the decorations, Miss Florence Mallett and Miss Gladys Townsend were responsible. The bride-to-be was the recipient of many gifts, which were presented to her in a prettily-decorated box. Following tea, the guests spent the remainder of the afternoon at the lake, boating and swimming.

Miss Evelyn Jackson, who has been with her parents for a week or so at Fulford Harbor, left on Sunday for Duncan, where she will be

Steamers on Thames—Canada Buys Last of Liverpool
Hansom Cabs—Tunnel Inspires Great Works—
Preparing for Coronation Anniversary—Postoffice Pens

By J. EDWARD NORCROSS

NOTE—The Colonist has been fortunate in securing a weekly article, of a chatty nature, from J. Edward Norcross, now resident in England. Mr. Norcross is one of the best known journalists of Western Canada. He was associated with newspaper work in Nanaimo, Vancouver and Victoria. At different times he was managing editor of The Vancouver World, Sun and Star. Several years ago he was president of the Parliamentary Press Gallery at Victoria, and was one of the founders of the British Columbia Institute of Journalists.

LONDON.—Time was when there were penny steamers on the Thames, but they disappeared many years ago. The transportation authorities of London, hard pressed by a traffic problem that gets worse every week, talk of restoring them and so making use of a splendid natural highway.

But they talked of it last year and the year before that—the proposal, indeed, has become a hardy annual. There being no penny steamers yet, one embarks on a gas launch at Westminster Bridge, a gas launch without protection from the weather and generally so crude in its appointments that no Western community in Canada would put up with it on its local waters.

True, "a salmon motor vessel" with "fully licensed bar on board" was advertised to run, but nothing of the sort put in an appearance, and as we wanted to see the river, the real London River, below London Bridge, and did not care a fig about either the salmon or the bar, we set off.

We shot under bridge after bridge, noted how far the process of demolishing Waterloo Bridge had got (they were still arguing in the House of Commons whether or not the London County Council had any right to demolish it at all), and so, passing the Tower, came into the Pool of London, with Rotherhithe on one side and Wapping on the other.

One knew, just as one knew hundreds of other facts, that the Port of London was the greatest port in the world, greatest, that is, in volume of shipping and traffic, but it came home to one now.

Large steamers from the ends of the earth passed up and down bound to or from the docks on the Isle of Dogs or over on the Surrey side; huge barges floated down with the tide without other means of propulsion, it serving to take them up river again when it turned; others with copper-colored sails lumbered along, tugs snorted their way up and down at their own pleasure; hundreds of cranes waved their antennae in the air as they swung the cargo into or out of the holds of the vessels moored beside the gaunt black warehouses that lined the river on both sides—the West End was behind us and this was England at work, and it was difficult to believe that with all this enormous activity the depression, despite optimistic talk, was still a serious factor, that in the hundreds of miles of the densely-packed streets of St. Paul's, Poplar and Deptford, scores of thousands of people were dependent on public measures of relief.

And so we went on down past Limehouse, where Mr. Lloyd George, years ago, added the word "limehousing" to the English language. That was when he abused the aristocracy of England in terms that left nothing to the imagination of the East End. Belgravia has never forgotten it, and even though the little Welshman should win another war, never will.

And thus we came to Greenwich in a storm of wind and rain, the wind blowing the foam from the tops of the choppy waves into our faces—for we were getting down into the estuary now and the river was widening out.

Gallions Reach, made famous by a recent "best-seller," lured us on, but Greenwich was our objective. We landed and sought a taxi, but found that taxis were not to be had in Greenwich—eight miles only from St. Paul's.

Apprope of this I may note here a news item to the effect that the last hansom cab in Liverpool has just been shipped to Canada, its new owner being a tourist, who had taken a fancy to it.

It reminds me that the ancient "growler," the four-wheeled cab, is still to be found in the borough of Greenwich. You may not be able to get a taxi, but if you arrive at a row of three "growlers" waiting for customers.

The hansom cab that has gone to Canada used to meet the tide of Man steamers at the Liverpool pier-head, but its former owner found the horse-shoeing expenses too heavy, and at last gave it up.

"On no cities" "His Majesty's realm have the blows of the depression fallen with greater or more unexpected severity than in the twin capitals of Lancashire," a great London daily observed on the occasion of the visit of the King and Queen to Manchester and Liverpool.

That visit drew the attention of the country to the gallant spirit with which the County Palatine was meeting adversity.

The great tunnel under the Mersey was begun before the financial debacle of 1929 threatened the cotton industry, with the loss of the greater part of its export trade, but the new public library and the extension of the town hall at Manchester, which the King declared open the other day, the great arterial road between the two cities, which he inaugurated and over part of which he drove on his way to the tunnel, and the new "super-park" at Walton Hall, a Liverpool suburb through which he passed, are all works begun since the completion in Lancashire's darkest hour. Birkenhead, too—but Birkenhead is in Cheshire—had a new library, the doors of which flew back when His Majesty, emerging from the tunnel, pressed a switch.

In all, the new construction formally brought into use by the King, involved an expenditure approximately $70,000,000, of which the tunnel absorbed $40,000,000.

This latter was, of course, the central feature of the celebrations. Liverpool was riotously happy over it and gave up a whole week to pageantry and other delights. It then turned its attention to the new Roman Catholic Cathedral, the east front of which is to be built first. Enough of the five millions it will cost is in hand to justify an early beginning.

At the same moment, Salford, which is Manchester's twin borough, is planning a colossal scheme of development, virtually involving the rebuilding of a great industrial city—a virtual "rubbing out and starting afresh" in the congested heart of Salford, where the mean streets in which live the operatives cluster around the ugly factories, and where on the finest summer days the sun is always more or less obscured by the smoke that rises from hundreds of tall chimney stacks.

The festivities at Manchester and Liverpool and the tremendous welcome given to the King and Queen have quite possibly struck the note for the celebrations that are to take place next year when His Majesty completes his quarter of a century on the throne.

"What Lancashire thinks this year, England will do next year," says a great newspaper, adapting the well-known proverb for the occasion.

It is now suggested, in quarters that have influence, that a royal progress through the United Kingdom should form part of the programme, the culmination of which will be, of course, a national thanksgiving service at St. Paul's Cathedral.

No decisions have yet been taken, but the idea has caught on and it is quite likely that next summer their Majesties will pass from city to city amid the acclamations of subjects never more loyal to the Sovereign than they are today.

Stung into action by the jokes of which postoffice pens were the subject, the authorities some time ago took out the old nibs and replaced them with stainless steel ones.

These became so popular at once that they disappeared immediately from the seventy-five large offices where they had been provided.

Holders were then tried in which the nibs were so firmly inserted that they could not be taken out.

The result was that both holder and nib were appropriated. With one exception the story was the same from every postoffice. Chelmsford, however, reported that it still had all its pens complete with nibs they had been chained to the desks.

Undertaken by defeat, the department now proposes to issue 10,000 de luxe pens, the holders of which will be painted a bright red and otherwise so distinguished as to make their public ownership plain wherever and by whomsoever they are seen.

A sort of "honesty competition" is to be instituted among post-offices, and whether a town deserves further improvements in its postal facilities will be decided by its record therein.

This is by no means all that the department is doing to provide the public with better service. Advances are being made in several directions along the vigorous initiative of the Postmaster-General, Sir Kingsley Wood. A noticeable example of this is the reduction in telephone charges and Sir Kingsley's campaign to make the telephone such a recognized and usual household convenience as it is in Canada and the United States.

Sir Kingsley, it should be said, has a better chance to inaugurate reforms than any of his predecessors. The Postoffice is a revenue-producing department, but until lately has had no control over its expenditures. Every item had to be referred to the Exchequer, which was chiefly interested in getting as much money out of the institution as possible and begrudging spending any on new projects.

As one writer puts it: "Each week the Postoffice handed over its gross receipts to the revenue authorities and each week the Exchequer doled out the amount required to meet current expenditures."

Sir Kingsley has fought for and brought about a revolutionary change in this respect.

Instead of all the surplus of revenue over expenditure going to the Exchequer, a limit has been set. For the next three years the Postoffice will pay a specified sum to the Exchequer and keep the rest.

In the current year Sir Kingsley expects to have about six million dollars which can be expended without reference to the Exchequer. One of the immediate results is the reduction of telephone charges.

There will have to be further reductions, however, before telephone subscribers are favored with a service at a cost as low as that of the cities of Western Canada.

"Did you enjoy your ride last evening with that young doctor?" "Indeed I did. He has a most charming roadside manner."

Turner Sets Record for U.S. Crossing

BROOKLYN, Sept. 1 (AP)—Col. Roscoe Turner, dashing speed demon of the air, set a new record for a flight from the Pacific to the Atlantic today, of ten hours and two minutes.

He roared into Floyd Bennett Field at 4:05 p.m., Eastern standard time, shading the record he made last year of ten hours and four minutes.

The clockers figured his margin over the old mark at two minutes and thirty-nine seconds.

Pat went to England to spend his holidays. Once settled in his lodgings he placed a full bottle of Scotch whisky in the cupboard. After a few days he discovered that the whisky was disappearing rapidly.

Calling the landlady, he inquired about it, and she cried indignantly: "Me take your whisky! Not likely. Remember, I come of good English parentage."

"Shure," said Pat. "I'm not being concerned about your English parentage, be jabers, it's your Scotch extractions I'm telling yes about."

She: "I think it's a bad state of affairs when one reads of comedians earning more than Cabinet ministers." He: "Oh, I don't know. On the whole, they're funnier."

WILL RENOVATE PEDDLER'S ACRE

London County Council Plans Improvement on South Bank of Thames

LONDON.—The new scheme that the London County Council has for improving the south bank of the Thames between Westminster and Waterloo bridges deals with a strip of land which used to be known as Peddler's Acre.

An ancient story has it that a peddler once owned a faithful dog which dug up some treasure while his master was having a nap. With this treasure the peddler founded a prosperous business, and as a mark of gratitude he bought this land and left it to the parish on the understanding that a representation of himself and his dog should be shown in a window of the parish church of St. Mary's, Lambeth. The original glass was destroyed, but replaced some years ago by another window.

If the new scheme materializes, the jumble of shanties and warehouses, which is in so jarring a contrast to the beauties of Wren's spires and steeples, will be replaced by new and more appropriate buildings.

PROPOSE CODE FOR PLUMBERS

Representatives Present Views to Government—Condition Reviewed

Subject to the approval of the Economic Council and authorized by the Provincial Executive Council, members of the plumbing and heating trades of British Columbia propose to set up a board of control, composed of members of the profession to administer a code of ethics to apply to all branches of the trade in the Province.

Announcement of the proposal was made following a conference of representatives of the British Columbia Plumbing and Heating Association with members of the Economic Council, here. It is understood that the proposal has the approval of all members of the trade in the Province.

SET UP OF BOARD

The board of control, if approved by the Government, will be composed of five members who shall designate the requisite officers and engage the necessary staff and shall have the power to demand from organizations to whom the code shall apply, any statistics, data, or information pertaining to the conduct of the trade.

The board will also set the hours of work with eight hours as the minimum shift, and may also determine overtime periods. It shall have access, once a year, to all cost-finding records and other statements connected with the trade with the provision for exemption of small trade shops.

The suggested code is a lengthy document which will have to be revised before being finally adopted.

The representatives' submission follows:

BRIEF SUBMITTED

"No business is more typical of the extreme situation in Canada, and of the tremendous difficulties in which industry as a whole finds itself, difficulties which have been greatly increased by the continued depression and the sharpening of the competitive struggle within its own ranks, than the plumbing and heating industry.

"Home and foreign policy, economic and financial policy, all fields of public life are so cluttered up with an immense accumulation of difficulties that desperation has encouraged the British Columbia Plumbing and Heating Association to seek out new ways and undertakings to prevent, if possible, a total collapse of industry.

"In all the associations and among the individual members of the profession there is such uncertainty and hopelessness with regard to economic affairs, coupled with a desperate search for new solutions, many of which have been abandoned even before they are formulated that only the most enthusiastic of the trade have hope for the success of the petition we now place before you.

TRADE SITUATION

"The seriousness of the situation is indicated in the statistics which we shall place before you, and by the rapid pace at which, hitherto, leading stable business firms are being driven to the wall. The 'moral' dilapidation of the members of the trade is tremendous, only up to now this is only known to those intimately connected with the trade. One after another we are going down.

"There are now fifty-five licensed plumbing and heating contractors doing business on Vancouver Island, with a scant half-dozen carrying on in what could be termed a legitimate revenue-paying way.

"We submit that the Government is provided with full powers to assist us to control all the field of our operations, and up to now we have not asked to be helped to weather the storm.

"We have hitherto depended on a gentleman's agreement and others. All have failed. The continuation of this policy has undermined our position; to an increasing extent the retreat is no longer possible to hide ourselves behind the worn-out shield of a stiff upper-lip.

"Today there exists among us no difference of opinion, conditions have become such, and in such tremendous volume, that we are all agreed that a common policy for the proper conduct of the sanitary business and the safeguarding of the public health of the Province can only be assumed by the exercise of dictatorial powers, conferred upon certain educated members of the profession.

CALLOUSES

Quickly Relieved and Safely Removed

Try this nothing, healing, double-acting treatment—Dr. Scholl's Zinopads. These cushioning, protective pads relieve pain at once and stop pressure on the sore spot. Use them with the separate Medicated Pads, included in every box, to quickly, safely remove calluses. Sold everywhere.

Dr. Scholl's Zinopads

"That is why we are here today. The conduct of the Province health regulations is only able to be maintained, and the public health can only be safeguarded, just so long as we have a stable and functioning plumbing fraternity.

"Every plumber in the Province is in favor of our petition and of encouraging the maintenance of the high standard to which sanitation has been brought, as well as the leading manufacturers, the leading wholesalers, and the trade journal, but when it comes to a question of how to maintain it, then the differences of opinion are so great that an agreement without Government aid is impossible.

"The plumbing and heating business is in a desperate situation, and when the health of a community or a province is at stake, then we consider we are no longer justified in remaining apathetic and continuing a policy of drifting. At recent conferences in Victoria and Vancouver, representatives of the trade of the Province disclosed to us the real situation. Our deliberation resulted in sending out a questionnaire to each and every member of the profession and almost all of them practically demanded that a code of ethics and a board of control be brought into being, clothed with statutory powers for the regulation of each and every member of his trade.

"It is true, expressions of opinion were heard on every side, that the situation was well nigh hopeless, no matter what measures the Government may take.

"And whatever reverse may be made of the situation by remedial legislation it could only result in affording nothing more than temporary relief.

"These opinions were not concurred in," the statement concluded.

The delegation consisted of W. Thacker, W. J. McDowell and F. C. Graham.

FILM SETS TO BE FURNISHED

Public Will Be Afforded Opportunity to See Studio During Fair Week

Northern Films Ltd. have put all the sets of "The Crimson West" and "The Black Robe" motion picture films into the Automobile Building at the Willows Fair grounds, and this week will complete furnishing them and arranging other equipment of motion picture work for the public to see during exhibition week. It was announced yesterday by Kenneth Bishop on behalf of officials of the company.

There are log cabin sets from "The Crimson West," showing how the interior of a cabin scene is obtained, and yet at the same time securing sufficient light with which to film the pictures.

Of greatest interest, however, will be the Chinese temple scenes from "The Black Robe," and the caves and grottoes, which played so important a part in the climax of the film.

OTHER SCENES

Other sets will include a Chinese curio shop, Chinese restaurant, futuristic bedrooms and living rooms of an eccentric, hospital room, library, jail scene and castle miniature.

Among the equipment on display will be sound booms, batteries of various lights using globes of 2,000 watts, and generators.

There will be players on some of the sets, particularly in the Chinese temple scene, while the Chinese restaurant actually will be in operation.

Mr. Bishop believes that this attraction will be one of the most outstanding at the fair, and will give the public an introduction to the new company that will undertake the production of motion pictures at the Willows.

"The Black Robe" will be finished at the studios, there being only the developing and cutting to complete, and it is expected that Victorians will have an opportunity of seeing the second production shortly.

"British Agent" To Open Shortly At London Shows

LONDON—The first print of "British Agent," in which Kay Francis and Leslie Howard are starred, and which was previewed earlier this week at the First National offices, has been shipped to London and will be shown here in about ten days to R. H. Bruce Lockhart, author of the best-seller from which the picture has been made. An effort will be made to have Miss Francis, William Gargan, of the cast, and Michael Curtis, the director, all of whom are now visiting in Europe and England, present with Lockhart at the premiere showing in London. The New York opening of "British Agent" will be at the Strand Theatre.

Perry Scores Easy Victory in Initial Match in U.S. Meet

Defending Tennis Titleholder Has Little Trouble in Eliminating Former University Star—Lott, Stofen, Sutter and Allison All Come Through—Latter Hard Pressed

By BOB CAVANAGH
FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—The preliminary rounds of the first round of the fifty-third men's national tennis championship went along today without a hitch, with Fred Perry, the British holder of the title, barely getting a workout in his elimination of Carl H. Schweikhardt.

While most of the big guns were muffed by virtue of receiving first round byes, the British titlist accounted for the former Columbia University star, 6-0, 6-1, 6-3, and led four seeded domestic challengers—George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago; Lester R. Stofen, of Los Angeles; Clifford Sutter, of New York, and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Texas into the second round.

They were the only members of a select group of fifteen American and foreign seeded players who saw action in the opening round.

EASY FOR PERRY

Perry completely dominated the first two sets, forcing Schweikhardt into errors and depriving his American rival of a single earned point. Lott, whose victory over Frank Shields, yesterday, in the semi-finals of the Eastern grass court championship brought him right among the foremost contenders for the crown, put on an indifferent performance and barely staved off elimination by young Marco Hecht, University of Pennsylvania star. The veteran Chicago Davis Cup doubles player learned to his discomfort that "hot dogs" and beer don't mix before a match and, with the youngster having every stroke in his repertoire working to perfection, Lott had to make some remarkable recoveries in the final set to pull out the match, 6-2, 10-8, 3-7, 4-6, 6-3.

IN HARD BATTLE

Allison, the man figured to have the best chance of restoring the championship to this country, met a formidable antagonist in Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D.C., and had to lift his game to the heights that carried him to victory in Newport and Longwood tournaments to turn back the vigorous challenge of the youngster, who was a finalist in the 1934 inter-collegiate championship. He won 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Stofen, who was beaten in the semi-finals last year by Perry, was devastating on the attack as he squelched Lieut. James M. Farrin, Jr., of Edgewood, Md., 6-1, 6-1, 6-1, while Sutter had almost as little trouble disposing of Elmer J. Griffin, of New York, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

Robert Murray, of Montreal, was eliminated by Dr. Lawrence Kurrok, of New York, 14-12, 6-4, 4-6, 4-6, 7-5.

ENGLISH NET STARS SHINE IN THE EAST

Katherine Stammers Takes Singles—Pairs With Freda James in Doubles

RYE, N.Y., Sept. 1 (AP).—Katherine Stammers won the women's singles title of the Eastern grass court tennis championships, today, defeating Freda James, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, in the fourth all-English final in as many years.

Miss James, surprise conqueror of her compatriot, Betty Nuthall, in the semi-finals, yesterday, put up a surprisingly strong battle against Stammers, but finally succumbed to the steady play of Britain's fourth-ranking player. Miss James is ranked No. 12 abroad.

In 1931 and 1932, Mrs. Elsie Goldsack Pittman defeated Joan Ridley for the title, while last year Dorothy Round, first-ranked British star was victorious over Mary Healey.

Miss Stammers and Miss James returned to the court after their singles tussle to annex the doubles, defeating Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian, and Dorothy Andrus of Stamford, Connecticut, 6-4, 6-3.

CAPTURE DOUBLES
Donald Budge, red-headed Oakland youngster, and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, today won the men's doubles, 7-5, 8-6, 6-1.

Mako and Budge had scored a surprise victory over the English stars, Fred Perry and F. H. D. Wilde, to reach the finals.

The men's singles final between George Lott, of Chicago, and Frankie Parker, of Springfield, N.J., will be played tomorrow.

The Gulls' cousins, Dominion champions at all-round athletics, will compete at the Labor Day sports at Nanaimo. The British Columbia championship will be decided in the running broad jump and the hammer throw.

Twice only in the history of the great national game of lacrosse the senior amateur championship has come to Victoria, and at the time that it did come to this city the big rivalry and fast playing was between Victoria and Vancouver, while New Westminster was practically out of the championship running, not getting a look in from the year 1880 to 1893.

MAY LOONEY IS FIRST IN SWIM EVENT

Ohio Girl Captures Five-Mile Marathon From Classy Field—Race Close

LAKEFRONT, TORONTO, Sept. 1 (CP).—Triumphing over twenty-two of the best long-distance women swimmers in Canada and United States, May Looney, of Warren, Ohio, today won the Canadian National Exhibition five-mile swim for the women's championship of the world and $2,000 prize money.

Janet Sheather, of Port Credit, Ont.; Charlotte Acres, Vancouver; Eva Bein, New York; Ruth Downing, Toronto; and Mona Looney, the winner's sister, followed the Ohio girl across the line to win $1,000, $500, $250, $150 and $100, respectively.

Sweeping into the lead before the first half-mile was finished, Miss Looney never faltered as she covered the five miles in 2 hrs. 28 mins. 30 secs., more than four minutes ahead of Miss Sheather, and almost seven minutes ahead of Miss Acres.

PLACES SECOND

Miss Sheather, winner of the recent Chicago marathon, completed the course in 2 hrs. 32 mins. 35 secs., while Miss Acres went over the finish line in 2 hrs. 35 mins. 24 secs.

Miss Acres started out slowly, but increased her stroke shortly after the start, and at the end of the first mile she was in third place, behind the two ultimate winners, and twenty yards ahead of Nell Hurley, of Memphis, Tenn.

Miss Hurley overtook the pretty Vancouver girl as they swam into the second mile, and the pair remained together until the end of the fourth lap. A sudden attack of stomach sickness forced Miss Hurley out of the water at the start of the fifth mile and Miss Acres took over third position, which she held to the finish.

Ann Mundigel, Vancouver's other entrant, crossed the finish line shortly after the prize winners had finished.

"Torchy" will race in London, England, in January, and will probably ride in several other European races, since foreign promoters have been negotiating for his services.

The Victoria red-head has won twenty-four out of the forty-eight six-day races in which he has ridden. This season he will be out to

Establishes English Channel Mark

E. H. Temme, London insurance clerk, completes, after a seven-year interval, a "round-trip" swim of the English Channel. In 1927, Temme swam from France to England. Now, in 15 hours and 55 minutes, he has swum from England to France. This picture shows the Britisher in the Channel on his "return trip." He is the first person to swim the Channel in both directions.

Torchy Peden Outlines Programme for Season

Giant Red-Headed Victoria Six-Day Bike Rider Has Busy Time Ahead—Opens Up in Detroit—To Invaide England—Seeks Record

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (CP).—William "Torchy" Peden, of Victoria, B.C., giant six-day bicycle rider, today announced his programme for the first half of the 1934-35 six-day bike race season before leaving for Detroit to take part in the first grand, which begins there next week. The race in that city will be an open-air affair.

Peden will begin his sixth season of indoor racing at Pittsburgh, September 22. He will invade Montreal, October 24. Toronto fans will see him in action the week of October 28, followed by a race at Cleveland starting November 11. Both Minneapolis and New York promoters are bidding for his services December 2. He will then ride at Buffalo, beginning December 16.

TO INVADE ENGLAND

"Torchy" will race in London, England, in January, and will probably ride in several other European races, since foreign promoters have been negotiating for his services.

The Victoria red-head has won twenty-four out of the forty-eight six-day races in which he has ridden. This season he will be out to gain recognition as the world's greatest six-day rider—a title which is now held by Piet Van Kempen, of Holland, by virtue of winning twenty-seven of the long grinds. It took Van Kempen fifteen years in which to run up his string of victories.

Thrills galore are promised the thousands of people who are expected to witness the outdoor races at Cordova Bay tomorrow afternoon, under the auspices of the Victoria Outboard Racing Association. The programme will start at 1:30 o'clock, and from the time the first bunch of dare-devil drivers gets away with the crack of the starter's gun until the last race is completed, Cordova Bay, one of Victoria's most popular seaside resorts, will be the scene of much activity.

Leading drivers of the Pacific Northwest with their frail craft capable of making anywhere from twenty-five to fifty miles an hour will be seen in action in the event, which promises to eclipse any previous effort of the local association.

Complete progress of the races will be given to the spectators by means of a public address system which is being installed for the event. At the microphone will be H. B. Jackson, National Outboard Racing Association official of Vancouver, who knows every angle of the speedboat game.

Judges for the events, announced yesterday by the committee, will be W. C. Moreau, K.C., and J. G. Elliott, pioneer yachtsman and president of the Vancouver Island Outboard Association.

Eddie Gerard to Pilot St. Louis

OTTAWA, Sept. 1 (CP).—Eddie Gerard, manager of Montreal Maroons for the last two years, will pilot the St. Louis team in the National Hockey League, formerly the Ottawa Senators. It was learned here today from an official source.

Gerard's contract with Maroons had another year to run but he reached an agreement yesterday to terminate it. He is expected to sign a contract over the week-end with Redmond Quinn, president of the St. Louis team.

Gerard went into professional hockey in 1914 with Ottawa Senators, remaining with them until 1922. During those years he was regarded as one of the best defencemen in hockey and played on three Stanley Cup teams, 1920, 1921 and 1922.

Gerard went to Maroons in 1926, leading them to their first championship. He remained with them until 1931 when he went to New York Americans, returning to Montreal in 1932. The St. Louis team will train here before the season opens.

EIGHT SURVIVORS LEFT AFTER SOME KEEN COMPETITION

Ken Lawson, Young Medalist, Creates Sensation by Decisively Down Jimmy Todd, 7 and 6—Morrison Advances With Two Victories—Two Extra-Hole Matches—Final Tomorrow

Headed by the young medalist, Ken Lawson, of the Uplands Golf Club, who scored two fine victories, one on the last green and the other decisively, favorites advanced to the quarter-finals of the annual city championship as match play opened yesterday at the Royal Colwood course. The quarters will be run off this morning and the survivors will meet this afternoon to see who will clash tomorrow in the thirty-six-hole final for the crown.

Keeping pace with Lawson was the defending titleholder, the long-hitting Bob Morrison, from the same club, and one of the strong favorites. Morrison put out H. G. English in the forenoon, 6 and 5, and then went on to eliminate R. L. Challoner, 3 and 2, while Lawson had a narrow win in his first match, downing R. W. MacKenzie on the eighteenth green, but in the afternoon he cut loose with a brilliant exhibition to put Jimmy Todd, ranking southpaw, into the gallery.

SECOND FLIGHT
First Round
J. M. Wood won from J. MacLellan, nineteenth hole.
H. G. DeWolf won from D. A. Macdonald, 1 up.

PIRIE WINS SWIM TITLE
Toronto Youngster Beats Field of Twenty-Seven in Canadian Final

TORONTO, Sept. 1 (CP).—Seventeen-year-old Bob Pirie tonight brought the Barker gold trophy to Canada for the first time when he defeated twenty-seven other finalists in a two-mile swimming race for the championship of Canada.

Young Pirie, a member of Canada's 1934 British Empire Games swimming team, covered the two miles in fifty minutes and thirty-nine seconds.

Harry Tressack, of the Lennox A.C., New York, was second, 200 yards behind the winner, in fifty-three minutes and fifty-nine seconds.

Peter Brunko, also of Lennox A.C., New York, took third position by a yard from Garfield Kelly, of Kingston, after the pair had struggled stroke for stroke during the last half-mile.

Arrows Defeat Vacs Nine, 6-3

VANCOUVER, Sept. 1 (CP).—Arrows beat V.A.C., 6-3, tonight, to take a two-to-one lead in games in the present four-out-of-seven City Senior League baseball play-off series.

R. H. E. Batteries: Gray, Rae and Henry; Bally, Drake and Pabovan.

Fine Labor Day Sports Programme Will Be Presented Here

WITH many first-class events carded, all of which are expected to draw large holiday crowds, Victoria's Labor Day sports programme is one of considerable length and variety, and should prove exceptionally appetizing to sport followers generally. The list of events includes rowing, bicycle and hydroplane races, inter-city cricket, baseball, and the final of the city golf championship. The complete programme follows:
10:00 a.m.—City golf final at Colwood Golf Club.
10:00 a.m.—Victoria vs. Seattle cricket match, at Beacon Hill.
10:00 a.m.—Bicycle races, at Beacon Hill.

2:00 p.m.—City golf final, at Colwood Golf Club.
2:30 p.m.—Sons of Canada vs. Poodle Dog Cafe, baseball, at Athletic Park.
2:30 p.m.—J.E.A. rowing races, at the Gorge.

GEHRINGER IS CREEPING UP

Detroit Slugger Gets Four Out of Six to Boost Batting Average

Charley Gehringer fanned his batting average, yesterday, while the other leaders were having a bad day, and moved into third place in the Big Six as a result.

Gehringer hit four times in six trips to the plate, adding four points to his average. His American League rivals, Lou Gehrig and Heinie Manush, each hit once in four tries, losing one point apiece, while Mel Ott and Bill Terry, of the Giants, each lost two points. Terry didn't get a hit in three tries, while Ott hit one out of five. Paul Waner, the leader, was idle.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

By Ripley

EXPLANATION FOR YESTERDAY'S RIPLEY CARTOON
The Father of Champagne—Father Dom Pierre Perignon (1640-1715), the Benedictine cellar master of the Abbey of Hautvillers, near Epernay, France, being in charge of the Rheims vineyard of the abbey, discovered the process of rendering the wine effervescent, and produced the first champagne. He also created the glass goblets in which champagne is drunk today. Withal he was an austere scholar, endowed with a very refined taste. A monument was erected to Dom Pierre on the site of the ancient abbey, in the champagne country.

BUCKERFIELDS CAPTURE B.C. SOFTBALL HONORS

Mainlanders Trim New Method Squad In Straight Games

Invading Nine Relieves Victoria of Provincial Title by Taking Opener, 6-2, and Nightcap, 13-3—Local Pitchers Hit Hard—Support Poor—3,500 Attend Fixtures

Hitting the ball hard in the pinch and fielding well behind the mound performances of Downes and Murray, Buckerfields smartly defeated the New Method squad, 6-2, in the opener, and 13-3, in the nightcap, to capture the B.C. championship. The Mainlanders, who had been defeated by the New Method squad in the quarter-finals, were relieved by the invading nine, which took the field at the Royal Athletic Park, where they took both ends of a twin bill from the New Method Laundry squad, Vancouver Island and city titleholders, by scores of 6-2, 13-3. The Mainlanders left no doubt as to the superiority of the two teams, and in each game were the better. Their victory takes from Victoria the British Columbia championship won last year by Macdonald's Service Station aggregation.

Favored by ideal weather, the series drew approximately 3,500 people, the largest attendance at the local enclosure for a long time. "Rory" McEllan, red-headed twirler, went to the slab in the afternoon game for the New Method Laundry, but was relieved in the fourth inning by Craig McClelland, after the visitors had collected four hits, including a circuit smash to deep centerfield by Macdonald's Service Station aggregation. Murray, speedball twirler, who expends a lot of effort in every pitch, held the New Method Laundry nine scoreless for six innings. However, two hits, a double by Viggers and a single by Robertson, coupled with a bobble and a wild pitch, brought the locals into the scoring for the first time, when they marked up two runs, in the seventh frame. Again, in the eighth, they scored when Larry Kennedy went the distance.

SMASHES HOMER
Leach, of the visitors, hit for four bases in the sixth inning, with one man on.

Buckerfields presented a well-balanced club, one that fielded well and hit the ball hard in the pinches. One of the features of their playing was the smart work of Spence, their catcher.

Prior to the start of the afternoon game, Mayor David Leeming, Alderman J. D. Hunter and Alderman Andrew McGavin officially opened the series, and His Worship met the players and managers of the clubs.

Bowlers Will Be Busy Tomorrow at Beacon Hill Greens

MEMBERS and friends of the Victoria Lawn Bowling Club are assured of a splendid day's sport at their favorite pastime, during the morning and afternoon of tomorrow, Labor Day. Beginning at 9:30 o'clock, competition in doubles will get under way, while the afternoon, commencing at 2 o'clock, will be devoted to contests between rinks. It is also expected that the greens will be open in the evening for those who are unable to attend during the day. This is an annual event, and one which is eagerly looked forward to by all bowlers of the district. A cordial invitation is extended to all devotees of the game.

Duncan Indians To Meet Braves In Ball Fixture

Determined to gain revenge for the two defeats they have sustained at the hands of the Victoria Braves, Duncan Indians will visit the Songhees Reservation, stronghold of the local tribe, this afternoon, to play a return baseball exhibition fixture. The game will get under way at 2:30 o'clock.

Following the ball game, Baptiste Paul, Indian wrestler, will take on two opponents, wrestling both at one time. Bull Durham Blake and Sonny Boy Albany will provide the opposition for the husky Indian mainman.

For next Sunday, the Braves are sending out a challenge to General William Cox's Army ball-players for a return game at the reservation, the final chapter of the 1934 baseball season with the Victoria Indians.

WOMEN'S TOURNEY Starts at Colwood Week of Sept. 17

FAIR sex members of the local golf fraternity will meet at the Royal Colwood course during the week of September 17 to tee off in the annual city championship, which was announced yesterday. Eighteen holes qualifying round will open the meet and low sixteen gross scores will form the championship flight. Match play will continue until Friday when the finalists will clash over eighteen holes for the crown won adorning the brow of Mrs. E. Jackson, of the Uplands Club. Entries must be in the hands of the secretary of the Colwood Club by 4 o'clock Friday, September 14. Competitors are extended the privileges of the course on Tuesday, September 11.

When the tournament gets under way, the field will be out to break the monopoly of the Taylor-Black combination, who have shared the honors alternatively ever since the meet was first held eight years ago. It has been Phil Taylor one year, then Dave Black, veteran pro at Shaughnessy Heights, and then Ken Black, son of Dave, would step in for the net of any of the

TEAMS STILL REMAIN CLOSE IN ENGLISH FOOTBALL

Three Teams Tied For Top Position In First Division

Victory by Manchester City Puts Them in Triple Deadlock With Sunderland and Everton—Arsenal Is Game Behind—Clyde Continues to Be Sensation of Scottish Loop

LONDON, Sept. 1 (CP).—Manchester City, the cupholders, went into a three-cornered tie for leadership of the first division of the English football league today with Sunderland and Everton, while Arsenal, the champions, made amends for a tie last week by a smashing 8-1 victory over Liverpool at White Hart Lane.

The Arsenal, however, is a game behind the rest of the division. Manchester City had little trouble disposing of Sheffield Wednesday at home, by a 4-1 score. Everton did the same with Preston North End, contenders from the second division, who had won both their previous matches. Sunderland, away, beat the Wolves, 2-1.

The only teams who had won two straight matches were defeated today. Birmingham, Preston and the Wednesday, none playing at home. Blackpool emerged undisputed leader of the second division, winning their third straight at the expense of Hull City, who were beaten 2-1. Burnley and Swans Town, who also had clean sheets up to today, were beaten at Notts County and Bradford City respectively. Newcastle United, playing in the second division for the first time this year, lost their third in a row, Brentford beating them on their own ground, 5-2.

SCOTTISH LEAGUE
GLASGOW, Sept. 1 (CP).—Scoring their fourth win in five starts, Clyde, lowly eleven of last season, kept on top of the Scottish League's first division today by trouncing Falkirk, 3-0. Rangers, the champions, Motherwell, Aberdeen and St. Johnstone remained a point behind, though all won today.

The Clyde eleven has dropped only a single point to date. Rangers had little trouble at Ibrox Park with Partick Thistle, winning 4-0, while Motherwell travelled to Albion Rovers and beat the newcomers from the second division by only the odd goal in five. Aberdeen at home whitewashed Dunfermline, the other promoted club, 2-0, and St. Johnstone got a 2-0 victory over the Hibs.

Ralph Rovers, hitherto undefeated in the second division, went to Dundee United's and lost, 4-0. As a result, Dundee, Stenhousemuir and St. Bernard's got up on even terms. St. Bernard's ran away with the match against Cowdenbeath, defeated from the first division, winning 10-1.

Clear Roads for Jimmy

Clear all roads to the welterweight championship! Here comes Jimmy McLarnin, jaws set, eyes glinting, determined to show the world that he's a better man than Barney Ross, sensational Chicago Jewish boxer, who lifted Jimmy's crown early this summer. Jimmy has apparently taken up motor-cycling between training periods. It is to be fervently hoped there is no repetition of the "Young" Stribling tragedy.

Local Dog Awarded With Diploma

SONIA Von Palanka, a Doberman Pinscher, belonging to Mrs. Charles A. McGee, Shepherd Hills Kennel, 932 Toimie Avenue, received an unique award recently when the owner was notified that she had been presented with a diploma of honor by Mr. W. J. Judy, of The Dog World, Chicago. The local dog is undefeated in her class on Vancouver Island. The cups in the photo were won at the recent Canadian Kennel Club show held here. Mrs. McGee's dog will also be seen at the forthcoming show to be held at the Willows, September 12 and 13.

SIDNEY TO HOLD BIG SPORTS DAY

Fine Programme of Events Arranged for Holiday Celebration—Dance Will Be Held in Evening

With many fine attractions billed, Sidney's Labor Day sports meet, at Memorial Park, promises to be one of the best ever staged by the Sidney Athletic Association. From 11 o'clock in the morning, Memorial Park will be a scene of much activity as the different sports events are run off. The day will be brought to a close with a big dance at Stacey's Hall, in the evening.

The complete programme follows: 11 a.m.—Ladies' softball game, Victoria Colored Kuba vs. All-Stars picked from North Saanich and Sidney teams.
12 noon—Girls' fifty-yard race.
1:15 p.m.—Baseball, Sons of Canada vs. Sidney.
3 p.m.—Cycling bases and throwing baseball.
3:30 p.m.—Softball game for the championship of the Island Softball League, between James Island (who hold the title) and North Saanich Service Club, for the McIntosh Cup. Prizes will be awarded in this game to the player making most runs, player making most home runs, player catching most flies and pitcher with most strikeouts.

Tag-of-war, baseball teams, winners to challenge all comers to pull both sides blindfolded.
Novelty events.
5:30 p.m.—Second baseball game between Sons of Canada and Sidney.
9 p.m.—Dance in Stacey's Hall, with five-piece orchestra from Victoria in attendance.

Tea, coffee, soft drinks, hot dogs, sandwiches, ice cream, confectionery and such things will be procurable on the grounds, and there will be such attractions as coconut shies and other side-shows.
Members of the Sons of Canada baseball club are asked to meet at 790 Princess Avenue, at 12 o'clock.

BOWLERS TO MEET

Plans for the present season will be discussed, and officers elected, at the annual meeting of the Olympic Senior Tenpin League, to be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the Olympic Alleys Commercial League bowlers wishing to bowl, are invited to attend the meeting.

Plays and Players

Pirates, Ships, Treasure In Lusty Capitol Drama

The generations of people both young and old who have been thrilled by "Treasure Island," Robert Louis Stevenson's famous story of pirate adventure, will find the vivid story-book experience of their youth, created on the screen in the picture that opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre, with Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper in co-starring roles.

With Beery as Long John Silver and Jackie Cooper as Jim Hawkins, boy adventurer, a cast has been assembled to bring each rover of the Spanish Main to the screen with living reality. Lionel Barrymore, blustering Billy Bones is one of the most entertaining characters he has

MIDNIGHT SHOW SET FOR TONIGHT

Capitol Theatre Offers "Affairs of Cellini" for Early Morning Patrons

"The Affairs of Cellini" starring Constance Bennett and Fredric March, opens tonight at the midnight show at the Capitol Theatre.

Fredric March, making his debut under Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl F. Zanuck's twentieth century banner, as the fiery, passionate sixteenth century Florentine goldsmith and lover, Benvenuto Cellini, is again the mad, impetuous March of "The Royal Family."

The film, which Bess Meredith adapted from Edwin Justus Mayer's New York stage hit, "The Firebrand," which was, in turn, based on the sensational Frank "Autobiography," concerns itself with the goldsmith's affairs with the amorous and beautiful Duchess of Florence and with his beautiful but gum model, Angela.

Constance Bennett is at her delightful best as the dashing Duchess, and Frank Morgan, repeating the role of the Duke which he originated in the stage play, is better than he was on the stage.

COMPANY TO PRESENT TWO OPERAS IN CITY

O. Marston Haddock, director and producer of the two ballad operas which are to be produced at the Empire Theatre, September 11, 12 and 13, has a notable ancestry, a distinguished career, and a real genius.

His grandfather was a violinist of first rank, and he is noted, possessor of the Emperor "Strad" which in due time became the property of his father, another violinist, Edgar

AMUSEMENTS

On the Stage
Empire—Billy Barty, in person.

On the Screen
Capitol—Jackie Cooper, in "Treasure Island."

Columbia—"Harold Teen," starring Hal Le Roy.

Dominion—Ronald Colman, in "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back."

Comedian's New Picture to Be Released Soon

NEW YORK.—Joe E. Brown's latest starring picture, "Six Day Bike Rider," is scheduled for completion within the next ten days, according to a wire from the Coast. "Six Day Bike Rider," as its title implies, is the story of a devotee of the "grind" or "whirl" to nowhere, as it is known by its enthusiasts. It is, moreover, with his misadventures more than his adventures. Not is it any secret that the hero finally wins the race and the girl. Brown has as his leading lady the one to be won, that is, Maxine Doyle. Others in the comedian's supporting cast for "Six Day Bike Rider" are Gordon Westcott, Frank McHugh, Arthur Aylesworth, Lottie Williams, Harry Seymour and Lloyd Neal. The picture's story was written and adapted by Earl Baldwin. It is being directed by Lloyd Bacon.

Drummond Returns Again In Dominion Attraction

Although Warner Oland is present in his best menacing form, a thick London fog is the real villain in 20th Century's "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," which is now showing at the Dominion Theatre.

For Captain Hugh Drummond, the person of Ronald Colman, has just sworn off adventure for life and decided to go down to Sussex and raise Hollyhocks, when he gets lost in a typical London pea-soup fog, wanders into the mysterious mansion of the sinister Hindu, Prince Achmed—played, of course, by Oland—and finds a murdered man in the library. The further discovery that there is a beauty in distress involved in the matter, in

"Treasure Island" Scene

HAROLD TEEN IS COLUMBIA STORY

Hailed by motion picture critics as the "laughiest" riot of love and comedy of the year, "Harold Teen," with Lillums, Lilacs and all the famous characters of Carl Ed's world popular comic strip cartoon will come to the Columbia Theatre, tomorrow, supported by innumerable other interesting characters, besides of pretty girls and spectacular dancers.

In the screen play, Harold Teen is a newspaper reporter much in love with Lillums, and the romance unfolds in infinite funny detail, despite its being nearly blighted through the interference of a wealthy banker who holds a note of Lillums' father.

LeRoy dances as only he can dance and climaxes with an original specialty that is a revelation in novelty. There are no villains, but the story includes the saving of a bank, jealousy, the staging of a small-town amateur play, love, suspense, and above all it is replete with beauty.

One of the greatest difficulties experienced by producers of Western movies is to get a story that is different, that gets away from formula. Tim McCoy, in his latest Columbia feature, "The Western Code," the added feature, has done that.

Youthful Screen Star In Company at Empire

Eight-year-old Billy Barty, who heads the stage presentation and his own company of entertainers at the Empire Theatre starting tomorrow, holds a record for the greatest number of pictures worked in during his five-year career. Billy, while only a small child, started his screen career in the popular Mickey Maguire comedy series and was one of the feature characters in all their productions.

He has been one of the "loaned" players in many of the big feature productions and can well be remembered for his imitable portrayal of the White Pawn in "Alice in Wonderland." He played opposite Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell in

NOT AFRAID OF CHILD ACTORS

Gary Cooper enjoys working in pictures with children—the more capable they are the better.

"I like having kids around," he says, "and it's always a pleasure working with one who does a good job and doesn't speak his or her lines like a parrot."

"Some actors and actresses are afraid to work with a child—they fear it will steal the picture. But I think that's the wrong viewpoint. Children are the natural centres of interest for a film audience, and if they turn out good jobs the audience is completely satisfied with everyone else in the cast. But no matter how good the child is, it doesn't detract from the performance of the adults a bit. In fact, it puts them on their mettle."

LIKES SHIRLEY

"Take Shirley Temple, for instance. She played with Carole Lombard and me in 'Now and Forever,' and proved herself surprisingly ably. She made it a better picture, and I think it really helped the rest of us."

"Off the set Shirley was a constant delight. She and I had a grand time."

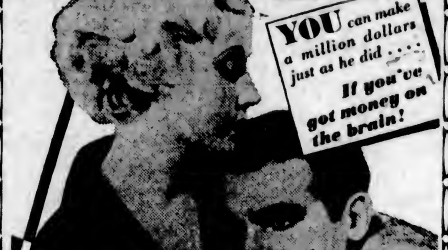

To which all the rest of the company can testify. Shirley and Gary were together all the time. He taught her to swim (he was once a cartoonist), he frequently wheeled her around the lot on camera dollies, and when the cast went to Lake Arrowhead for the filming of location scenes, he taught her to fish and ride a horse.

CROSBY TWINS WELL

VICTORIA XI AND ALBIONS IN TRIUMPHS

Former Beats Wanderers in Knockout Series and Latter Downs Incogs

Bowlers held away at Macdonald Park, yesterday afternoon, where Victoria defeated the Wanderers, 76 to 45, in a Victoria and District Cricket League knockout fixture. George Wilkinson, bowling for the winners, took seven wickets for the small total of seventeen runs, while Bosom, of the Wanderers, accounted for six of the opposition batsmen for thirteen runs.

Victoria went to bat first, and Kinch gave the club a good start when he scored thirty-one before being caught by Grant. Meredith was the only other member of the winning side to reach double figures, scoring twenty runs before being well bowled by Bosom. James led the Wanderers' bats with eighteen runs, but was finally bowled by Wilkinson, who was struggling with an exceptionally good length ball, and playing havoc with the opposing batsmen.

In a friendly match at the University School grounds, Albion defeated the Incogs by four runs, the final scores being 85 to 81.

VICTORIANS IN VICTORY

Five C's Defeat Seattle 133 to 49—To Play Cowichan Cricket Club Today

Featured by the second-wicket stand of W. H. Pendray and George Payne, who put on 78 runs, Five C's defeated the visiting St. George's eleven, of Seattle, 133 to 49 runs, yesterday afternoon, at Beacon Hill Park, before a large following of cricket fans.

The batting of the visitors was weak, five of their wickets falling before the fine bowling of W. H. Pendray, veteran bowler, for seventeen runs. P. C. "Pop" Payne, and his young son, Jack, took the remaining Seattle wickets.

Eden Quinton, skipper of the visiting team, and Webb were the only Seattle batsmen to reach double figures, scoring thirteen and seventeen runs, respectively. Quinton was also the most effective bowler for the visitors, taking six wickets for forty-nine runs.

During the afternoon the band of the Britannia Branch of the Canadian Legion rendered a number of fine musical selections.

TRAVELS TODAY
Seattle will journey to Duncan today to meet the Cowichan eleven. Buses will leave from the Balmoral Hotel, the visitors' headquarters, at 8:30 o'clock.

On Monday the United States team will oppose a Victoria picked eleven, at Beacon Hill, play commencing at 10 o'clock and concluding at 4:30 o'clock. There will be a luncheon interval from 1:15 o'clock to 2:15 o'clock, but no tea interval. Stumps will be drawn at 4:30 o'clock.

In order to allow the Seattle players to get the boat, N. Wilkinson and Reg Woods will be the umpires for the match with W. I. Land as official scorer.

PSYCHIC BID WINS STAKES
Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Entry Gallops to Rich Purse Victory in East

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., Sept. 1 (AP)—Psychic Bid, stablemate of the mighty Cavalcade, carried on for Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stables today, challenging for the two-year-old turf championship by thrashing fifteen of the country's ranking juveniles in the thirtieth running of the Hopeful Stakes at the closing of Saratoga.

Handed by Mack Garner, who guided Cavalcade through the rich three-year-old stakes, Psychic Bid breezed home to earn $24,000 for his owners, and pay his backers 4 to 1.

The field included the previously unbeaten Balladier and the speedy Boxtorn from E. R. Bradley's Kentucky farm, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Plat Eye, winner of the National Stallion and Juvenile Stakes, at Belmont Park. When the dust had cleared at the end of the six and one-half furlongs, however, two despised outsiders were nearest.

Five lengths back of the Brookmeade colt trailed Rosemont, a 25 to 1 shot, from Will Du Pont, Jr.'s Foxcatcher Farms. Another four lengths to the rear was Mrs. William Siegel, Jr.'s Esposa, held at 100 to 1, and paying 10 to 1 to show.

Most golf instructors prefer to string along with the pupil's inclination to learn the grip first, then look to body positions and movements later.

The result is that the player never gets around to learning the proper body action and balance.

It's the first thing the successful player learned as a boy, and it could be learned by older people if made as the first step.

The same thing applies to repairing the swing. When trying to learn old faults originate with incorrect or fix up the swing, start at the hips, which are the hub.

Once the hub is right, the rest of the swing is easy.

Veteran Marksman Puts on Good Score at Heals Rifle Range

Putting on the fine score of 102 out of a possible 105, Major Fred Richardson, of the Fifth Regiment, led the field at the weekly shoot of the Victoria and District Military Rifle Association, at Heals Range, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. H. Raymer and Sergeant A. E. Ashe, of the Canadian Scottish Regiment, were tied for second place with scores of 99.

Shooting will be carried out at the popular ranges tomorrow, commencing at 9 o'clock. Rifemen needing transportation are asked to be at the corner of Yates and Douglas Streets at 8 o'clock.

The annual competition for the O. J. Whiter, Sr., Cup will commence next Saturday, when the first stage, over the 200, 500 and 600-yard ranges, will be fired.

ATLANTA WAS BADLY BEATEN
Second Canadian Challenger for America's Cup Out-sailed by Defender

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (AP)—The American Cup yachting series in 1934 marked the beginning of the era when yachts were constructed especially for cup defence and trial races were held to determine defenders.

The Canadian Bay of Quinte Yacht Club had challenged with a sloop named Atlanta, which was launched only two months before the series of three races began and towed through the Erie Canal to United States waters by a team of mules.

The New York Yacht Club, holder of the international trophy, had three large and fast sloops on its roster—Gracie, Hildegarde and Mizchief.

Shelving these three boats for the time being, the cup committee ordered the construction of what was hoped would be a faster sloop than the others. The result was Pocahontas, and she fell far short of expectations.

The New Home in the Old Pasture
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

The Old Pasture far away on the edge of the mountain is very different from the Green Meadows or the Green Forest. Yes, indeed, it is very, very different. Reddy Fox thought so. And Reddy didn't like the change—not a bit. All about were big rocks and around and over them grew bushes and young trees and tall briars with long ugly thorns, and blackberry and raspberry canes that seemed to have a million little hooked hands reaching to catch in and tear his red coat and to scratch his face and hands. There were little open spaces where wild-eyed young cattle fed on the short grass. They had made a thousand paths all criss-cross among the bushes, and when you tried to follow one of these paths you never could tell where you were coming out at all. No, Reddy Fox did not like the Old Pasture. There was no long, soft, green grass to lie down in. And it was lonesome up there. He missed the little people of the Green Forest, and the Green Forest. There was no one to bully and tease. And it was such a long, long way from Farmer Brown's chicken yard that old Granny Fox wouldn't even try to bring him in a chicken. At least that's what she told Reddy. The truth is that what old Granny Fox knew that the very best thing she could do was to stay away from Farmer Brown's chicken yard for a long time. She knew that Reddy couldn't go down there because he was still too lame and sore to travel such a long way, and she hoped that by the time Reddy was well enough to go he would have learned better than to do such a foolish thing as try to show off by stealing a chicken in broad daylight, as he had when he brought all this trouble on them.

Down on the Green Meadows the home of Granny and Reddy Fox had been on a little knoll, which, you know, a little, low hill, right where they could sit on their doorstep and look over the Green Meadows. It had been very, very beautiful down there. They had made lovely little paths through the tall garden meadow grass, and the buttercups and daisies had grown close up to their very doorsteps. But up here in the Old Pasture Granny Fox had chosen the thickest clump of bushes and young trees she could find, and in the middle was a great pile of rocks. Way in among those rocks Granny had dug their new house. It was right down under the rocks. Even in the middle of the day, jolly, round, red Mr. Sun could hardly find it with a few of his long, bright beams. All the rest of the time it was dark and gloomy there. No, Reddy Fox didn't like his new home at all, but when he said so old Granny Fox boxed his ears.

"It's your own fault that we've got to live here now," said she. "It's the only place where we are safe. Farmer Brown's Boy never will find this home, and even if he did he couldn't dig into it as he did into our old home on the Green Meadows. Here we are and here we've got to stay because a foolish little fox thought himself smarter than anybody else and tried to show off."

Reddy Fox hung his head. "I don't care," he said, which was very, very foolish, you know; he did care a very great deal.

Overweight Patient Should Have Metabolism Test Before Using Dinitrophenol
By JAS. W. BARTON, M.D.

A physician happened to be looking out of his window and saw one of his patients walking along the road pushing a heavy motorcycle in front of him.

The patient consulted the physician, complaining of having been thrown off the motorcycle and "spraining" his ankle.

The physician examined the ankle, could feel no break, remembered that the patient had walked a quarter of a mile pushing the heavy machine, so decided that it was a severe sprain and advised rest, bathing in hot water, and bandaging when the swelling went down.

Later examination by X-ray showed a broken bone in the foot, and the patient limped for some months. This happened twenty years ago.

Were this case to come before a judge in a law court today, the first question the judge would ask the physician would be, "Did you have an X-ray examination made?"

If the doctor had failed to have the X-ray examination he might still reasonably defend himself because of his large experience with sprained ankles, and also that he wanted to save the patient the expense of the X-ray. Nevertheless, the judge, representing the people, expects the doctor to get an X-ray in these cases.

It would seem that some such course may now be taken regarding the use of the new weight-reducing drug dinitrophenol.

You can readily see that if an overweight individual can get rid of many pounds of weight without having to

Virginia Vane Says:

RELATD ATTACK OF CONSCIENCE MUST NOT INCITE TALE-TELLING

Dear Virginia Vane: I am in an embarrassing position and want to know how to deal with it. I am at present living with a dear friend of mine as her guest. I know that since her separation from her husband she has been leading a most irregular life, but feel that it has not been my business to remonstrate with her.

However, her children live here, too, and I have often thought that they are being influenced in the wrong direction by their mother's way of life. Now her husband, with whom she is still on friendly terms, is paying a visit to this town and he is very suspicious. He would, of course, take his children away from my friend if he knew anything about the way she acted. He is primarily interested in the children. I like him and sympathize deeply with his attitude. He has asked me many questions, and I am at my wit's end as to how to answer them. Can you give me any help?—Anne H.

When you accepted your friend's invitation to come and stay with her you tacitly accepted her way of life and agreed to put up with it.

You must have known since you've been in that house just what a bad influence was being exerted on the children. You couldn't, of course, change it, but had you been desperately concerned about it, you could have taken some pains to remove yourself from the scene of the unpleasantness.

Now you are receiving confirmation of your fears. An angry, suspicious father has arrived demanding to know how his children are being trained and your conscience has been pricked into action. You're beginning to wonder whether it isn't up to you as a good honest citizen to tell the truth and start trouble.

You aren't in any position to do this. You're a guest in the home of the woman whose under suspicion. One or two little hints from you might start a long-drawn-out legal war which would end in your friend's losing her children permanently.

To tell the husband the truth at this point is cowardice on your part. If you have any real desire to straighten out this situation, by all means go to your friend first. Let her know that she is entertaining someone who thoroughly disapproves of her conduct and of the effect her conduct is having on the children. Give her fair warning that you are not in sympathy with the course of life she has adapted.

Don't put yourself in the position of a spy. Be honest with yourself and admit that until the anxious father arrived, you were willing to let the children's problems take care of themselves.

Either start out with honesty and courage to do what you can to relieve the situation, or admit that you're not big enough for the job. Half-way measures and hints may start a hundred misunderstandings and cannot help but lessen your own self-respect.

B.A.B.: The trouble is that this situation could go on indefinitely if you allowed it to. And you could go on suffering tortures and suspense while you strove in all manner of subtle ways to find out the truth.

On the basis of a three-year friendship, if nothing else, you have the right to ask for a frank statement of facts. The boy protested his love for you for three solid years, you put up with his moods and his displays of selfishness, you gave him all your love and now suddenly he makes it plain that you two are just dear old platonic friends and nothing else.

And you sit back and take it because you hope that some miracle will occur which will either bring him back to you an ardent suitor—or else make the truth plain.

Sooner or later, of course, the problem will work itself out. But why waste all your youth and happiness trying to find out what's the matter. Shed some of your humility and realize that you are a human being with the God-given right to be happy. And that nobody has the right to keep you on tenterhooks, wondering day in and day out what has happened to spoil your romance.

Ask for the truth, and don't take half-truths. Don't be misled with evasions and tepid assurances that you've simply imagined the change. You've lived in purgatory for some time now and you know very well you haven't imagined it. Make this clear, and stick to your point. You want to know what's happened to change your devoted swain into an absent-minded friend.

Sometimes I wish I had the power to bully all you boys and girls out of this habit of wondering and suffering and hoping that the impossible will happen.

You must realize that it is up to you to end the strain. You alone can find out what's the matter by saying frankly that you can't stand the situation as it is and that for your own sake it must be changed.

Realize, B.A.B., that you will never know happiness going on in this way and that in order to give yourself a chance for some real peace and joy you must end this suspense one way or the other.

Departing Guest—You've got a pretty place here, Frank, but it looks a bit bare yet.
Host—Oh, it's because the trees are rather young. I hope they'll have grown to a good size before you come again.
Motorist—Explanation nothing! Long golden hair in the tounge! My wife's hair is black!
Chauffeur—I'll give you an explanation, sir.
Motorist—Explanation nothing! What I want is an introduction.

DEATH ON THE DIAMOND

BY CORTLAND FITZSIMMONS

SYNOPSIS

Since Pop Clark disbanded his famous Blue Sox ten years ago because the team were growing tired of the inevitable New York team, he has been trying vainly to win the United League pennant with his Blue Sox. As the season opens the sports writers, with the exception of Terry Burke of the Star, give them little chance and the gamblers are quoting 500 to 1 against their chances. Terry believes that the addition of Larry Doyle, the rookie shortstop who played such good ball with Fordham Dutch Schatz, the first baseman brought from Baltimore, and Doc Moran behind the bat, has greatly increased the chances of the Blues, but the old-time baseball reporters who know him when he says he thinks he will get a bet down on them. They agree that Doyle is a fine manager, but that the disbanding of the Blue Sox was a mistake.

Three scoreless innings followed. Doyle got a scratch single his first time at bat, but died at second. The Blues couldn't do a thing with Whitper. The next batter, Lefty Higgins, was pouring it in there, too. The only way you can pitch, is it? Well,

CHAPTER II

Lefty Higgins was on the mound losing them down to Moran. Over at short Larry Doyle was digging them out of the dirt and firing the Blues were showing plenty of pep and seemed pretty confident.

Dave Simons, the Philadelphia lead-off man, tossed away three balls before he took his stance facing Lefty Higgins. He was a right-handed batter and one of the best lead-off men in the league.

"Ball one." The first was low and outside. In quick succession came two more balls and then a high foul which hit the screen back of the plate. The crowd was yelling advice to Lefty. Simons watched a strike go over. Moran walked out toward Higgins and said something, but the next one was a ball and Simons trotted down to first.

Up in the press box Craven turned to Mullins. "It looks as if Lefty lost his control in Clearwater."

"Shut up, you pall-bearer." Terry was busy pounding his machine.

Joe Jacks was up next, and he swung at a high one for a foul. The two next were balls and the crowd started to murmur. Was Higgins going to put them in a line right at the offset? Jacks lined a hard single between second and first and Simons pulled up on third. Over in the dugout Pop Clark spat toward the bat rack. Higgins stood out on the mound looking the situation over. He did not seem to be the least bit rattled.

Doyle moved in a little closer to the grass. The next Philadelphia batter took a healthy cut at two strikes and fouled them off the stands. Lefty was putting the ball in there with plenty of stuff on it. The next ball was a liner right between third and short. Last spring high to his right and speared the ball, with practically the same motion he whipped it to Moran, who got Simons sliding into the plate by about two feet.

The crowd went wild. A lovely play and a sweet bit of thinking. Just as the crowd settled down after the thrill of the play, Bill around Larry's shoulder and forced him to duck. Whitper laughed. He called back to his catcher: "This guy is a cinch, Joe. All these college stars are yellow." Larry didn't answer. He hugged the plate and took his toe-hold. The next ball was straight for his head. Like a flash he hit the dirt. The crowd, sensing the little drama being enacted before their eyes, howled with glee. Some of them were for Whitper and the more partizan of the Blues' fans were behind Larry Doyle. After all, the kid had played a bang-up game and they didn't want to see him beamed by the cagy Whitper.

"Come on, you bum! Stand up there and take it," a raucous-voiced Philly fan yelled out.

Whitper waited a long time before throwing the next one. Another bean ball. This time Larry hit the dirt again. He rose from the ground covered with dirt. Throwing down his bat, he strode out to the mound.

"You dirty tramp, so that's the only way you can pitch, is it? Well,

In a twinkling of an eye, the game belonged to anybody. One down and a man on third. Any kind of sacrifice would bring the tying run across the plate. The crowd jammed the exits. There was an electric thrill to the game now.

Lefty Higgins dusted his hands with the resin bag. He worked the count two and three on him he fooled him on a slow-breaking curve over the outside corner of the plate.

A sigh of relief ran around the stands. Two down and Whitper, the pitcher, was up. Most of the fans thought that here was the spot for a pinch hitter. If they did, they failed to understand that select company of men like West Ferrell, Ruffing and Fitzsimmons. He was a pitcher who could hit.

Whitper received an unmerciful rapping as he stepped to the plate. He watched the first ball go by for a called strike. Higgins then tried a change of pace and Whitper swung with all the power in his beefy shoulders. The ball flew far into deep center-field, past the flagpole.

Harper pranced home and stood by the plate to welcome Whitper. The crowd was strangely silent. They were all watching the flight of the ball and wondering if Buck Hansen with his weak arm could throw it back to the plate in time to nip Whitper. If the ball went too far, Whitper would be sure to beat the throw.

Whitper was storming down past first. He rounded second and the coach on third base beckoned wildly for him to keep on coming. Whitper passed third and eased up a bit. As he neared home, he turned his head and yelled some epithet at the uncomfortable Higgins. He faced front and clutched his knees. His stride broke, he began to wobble. There was an expression of horrified amazement on his face as he staggered, stumbled and fell sideways, face forward about eight feet short of the plate. He lay still a crumpled mass.

In the meantime Hansen had thrown the ball to Dugan, who relayed it to Moran at home, who trotted down staring in amazement at the spectacle Whitper and touched him out.

Whitper was carried off the field on a stretcher and the fans began to wonder if Doyle's punch had carried dynamite with it, after all. The press box was in an uproar.

Whitper waited a long time before throwing the next one. Another Bean Ball! This time Larry hit the dirt again.

Philadelphia tail-end waded once or twice, but with two men on and one out in the third, Little Jole Brown ran in for a bunt and whipped the ball over to second for a meat play. The next batter struck out on Lefty's famous slow ball.

In the fourth the honors were even. The Blues started a mild uprising. Moran was living up to all his advance notices. He caught hold of a fast one and tripled off the right field fence. Doyle worked the pitcher till he got a walk. With the Philadelphia infield drawn in close, Lefty Higgins astonished himself and the crowd, too, by doubling into centerfield. A clean hit over second base. Larry scooted home behind Moran and his blue were two runs to the good. A Whitper, a little shaken, walked the next man, and Dutch Schatz was at bat swinging his club in blood-thirsty fashion. Whitper paused a moment before he sent the next one over. Schatz swung from his heel and topped the ball. Whitper put out his hand, but the ball was going too fast and caromed off his glove toward first base. Lefty Higgins sprinted home and the score was three runs for the Blues. The crowd was beside itself with joy. The Blues were showing a punch at last.

Whitper put the next three out, but it looked bad at that stage of the game. In the first of the fifth the Philadelphia heavy end was up. Dike Stewart picked out a line one and doubled through Schatz's legs down the first base line. It looked as if that hit of Lefty's had taken a little steam out of him. The Philadelphia players were all riding Lefty unmercifully. Walker, the Philly catcher, was up next and he took a walk. Two on and none out. "It's the same old Blues," Hovey complained. "Give 'em a lead and it goes to their heads."

As he spoke, Gilbert, the Philly second baseman, laid down a perfect bunt. Lefty Higgins ran in for it, but hesitated just a fraction of a second too long before pegging it down to Schatz. Gilbert was safe and Walker and Stewart, respectively, Higgins was badly rattled. He walked the next man up, forcing in a run, and then with two strikes on the next batter he managed to get him out on a deep catch behind third base. Walker beat the throw to the plate by an eyelash. Lefty regained enough poise after this to retire the other two batters and the Blues were still ahead by one run.

"They ought to take Lefty out of there," Terry was hopping around the press box. "He hasn't got a thing today. I guess he warmed up too hard."

The sixth inning went by uneventfully. In the seventh Higgins made a mistake that led to a run over the head of the seventh. Bill Bridges, and when he looked up the ball was soaring past him to land high up in the short right field bleacher for a home run. The score was three all and both teams had to start their ball game all over again.

In the Blues' half of the seventh Moran got a walk. Doyle came to bat. So far he'd got a single and a walk and a sacrifice, which is pretty nice going for a rookie making his big time debut.

Al Whitper was mad and he showed it. He walked toward the plate to take the ball from his catcher. "Look out, you fresh buster," he glared at Larry as he spoke. "I'm going to see if you can take it."

Going back to the mound, he wound up. The ball was head high hit the dirt on this one and see how you like it." He feinted with his left and landed a hard right flush to the point of Whitper's jaw. Whitper dropped like a log.

In a minute the field was a mad-house. Several Royal Blues rioters started climbing over the low wall from the grandstand and the cops grabbed them. It looked like a free fight for all comers. Styles, the big Philly catcher, ran out and grabbed Larry Doyle from behind. Milligan and Pharrman, the two "umps," crossed over and grabbed Whitper, who was getting to his feet with murder in his eyes. Pop Clark ran out of the dugout and took Larry by the arm, pushing Styles away. The umpire behind the plate, Moran, came down and ordered Larry Doyle out of the game.

The crowd gave Larry a terrific hand as he went into the dugout. There isn't any better way to get a ball park full of fans behind you than by scrapping for your rights. Every man in the crowd was for Larry.

They sent a man in to bat for Doyle and he got a walk. Whitper continued to pitch. Larry's blow didn't seem to have hurt anything on his pride. The next man up for the Blues was Schatz and he singled to right, driving Moran across the plate. The Blues were ahead once more. Whitper polished off the rest of the side without further trouble. A double play and an easy grounder to first accounting for the three men.

The eighth inning was uneventful. Shorty Dugan, the Blues utility man, was at short in place of Doyle and handled two chances easily. In their half the Blues went down, one, two, three and many of the fans started towards the exits.

Nothing can change complexion as fast as a ball game. In the ninth, Harper, the Phil's third baseman, beat out a puny little hit to Dugan. Dugan was playing too deep and failed to nip Harper at the bag by an eyelash. Gilbert, the second sacker, lifted a long fly to Buck Hansen, in center and Harper ran down to second after the catch. Hansen made a bad throw to Dugan and Shorty dropped the ball. Like a flash Harper was off for third. Dugan captured the ball and threw to Jole Brown, but Harper had made a magnificent slide and was called safe. Cobb had nothing on Harper when it came to a hook slide.

"What do you suppose happened to Whitper? Who'll run down and get the dope?"

"You're young, Terry. Why don't you do it?" Belts suggested.

With a bound Terry was off. He had no idea how lucky he was to be because of Bier's suggestion. After a short delay, Bill Swift went to the mound for the Phils in the last half of the ninth. He was rattled and showed it. He walked Jole Brown without ever once coming near the plate. The next man up was Reynolds, the left fielder and brother of Sid Reynolds, the reporter from Brooklyn. Reynolds settled the issue of the game with a screaming double down the third base line, and Brown, who had taken a long lead off first, ran home. The Blues had won their first game of the season.

The press box was wondering about Whitper and what had caused his collapse.

"I'll bet Terry has his nose into a piece of good news and will leave us flat," Bier mumbled.

"You sent him," Craven came back. "Funny he should be so long, though."

"Country Girl" Rehearsals to Begin Tuesday

In preparation for the presentation of Lionel Monckton's musical comedy, "A Country Girl," the Victoria Operatic Society will have their first rehearsal for the season, in their hall in the 1200 block, Rockland Avenue, on Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock.

The success of last winter's opera given by the society insures many applications for membership, and the committee wish all local singers to know that they are welcome to apply to the secretary, Mrs. Horace Hamlet, 1007 Amphion Street.

The excellent training received under the capable musical direction of Chris Wade and the stage direction of Reginald Hincks is most profitable and enjoyable.

VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1934

SCIENTIFIC ENIGMAS

PERCY C. RICHARDS

Richard Holmes

Frank Holdridge

Wilfred Hobday with the Telescope display

WHERE does life begin and death end? How long will the human heart continue to function after being removed from the anatomy? Just what is the Gamma ray? What is the tension of water? How do scientists measure distillation to one-thirtieth of a millionth of an ounce? How does water hold together? What causes earthquakes? Why do tides ebb and flow? How many light years is the nearest star from Victoria, B.C., and what is a light year anyway?

Just such a barrage of thought-provoking questions is what two youthful science students are now preparing to answer as they assemble their display in the first Hall of Science to be established at the Willows Fair.

Youthful Scientists

THE youths are Richard Holmes and Frank Holdridge. The former is a student of the University of British Columbia, and will receive his B.A. degree this Fall when he completes his thesis. He plans to take a post graduate course in bacteriology, and will endeavor to secure his doctor's degree.

Frank Holdridge is on the staff of the Dominion Meteorological Observatory, studying nature's emotions under the able guidance of F. Napier Denison, director of the observatory, and one of Canada's most outstanding meteorological scientists. Mr. Holdridge is hoping soon to be able to complete his university course, in which he is specializing in meteorology.

These two students visited the World's Fair at Chicago last year, and were inspired with the Hall of Science there. Undaunted by its magnitude, they decided they would establish one at Victoria's annual exhibition at the Willows, which this year will be held from September 10 to 15, inclusive.

They were fortunate in securing the whole-hearted co-operation of the Victoria Astronomical Society, and a group of noted scientists and educationists. This has made it possible for them to assemble an imposing array of instruments, tubes, lenses, charts and other exhibits.

Their miniature Hall of Science will deal with astrophysics, physical chemistry, biology, bacteriology, medical experiments, analytical chemistry, synthetic chemistry, and charts dealing with clouds, mathematics, biology, structural chemistry, star pictures, diagrams of atoms, and the Mendeleeff's table.

Biological Charts

Comprehensive Display

WHAT is the Mendeleeff's table? Well, you better take your notebook along, for these two youthful scientists are brimming over with enthusiasm, and a wealth of knowledge garnered from intensive study, and fortified by additional information supplied by authorities, who have assisted them in their enterprise. There are none of the elements that have been missed by the pair in their effort to make the display as comprehensive as possible.

They are absolutely undismayed. They will discuss, for instance, the manner in which hydrogen particles are bombarded in order to split some of them into smaller units so as to ascertain what the result will be. They will describe the process with a simplicity that will stagger the most inquisitive visitor. They will even give a demonstration of how it is done.

Probably one of their most interesting exhibits will be a frog's heart pulsating in Ringer's solution, a composition consisting of sodium chloride, calcium chloride, potassium chloride, sodium bicarbonate and distilled water. A little glucose is added to provide food for the tissue.

Messrs. Holmes and Holdridge will tell of how a New York laboratory has kept a human heart alive for three years in this manner, and after gazing at their exhibit of a frog's heart in operation, one begins to wonder just where life begins and death ends.

Delicate Task

PREPARING this particular exhibit was a delicate task. The frog's heart had to be removed while it was still beating, although the frog was virtually dead. A spot or two of adrenalin was applied just to stimulate the heart action until the subject matter was nicely arranged in the container for the public's gaze.

There is nothing in the way of scientific excursions that these youths are not willing to try. They plan to officially open their exhibition by turning on the lights from the rays of a star, which has been traveling earthward for four light years, which is 186,000 miles a second times the number of seconds there are in four years. This works out to something like 23,462,784,000,000 miles. However, these calculations have been done in round figures. If the exact figures were used the distance would be even greater, not to mention the extra day in leap year, which was not included in the computations.

This astronomical-electric feat will be performed by the use of a photo-electric cell, which has been loaned to the students by Dr. C. S. Beals, of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory.

Marvelous Mirror

REMEMBER the old Crazy House at the Gorge Park, where one could transform their figure into all shapes and dimensions by merely gazing into various mirrors? Well, there will be a convex mirror in the Hall of Science to illustrate the principles of light, and this mirror will erect an image so realistically that visitors are warned to take care they do not start conversing with someone who is not really there.

The mirror will throw the image upward so that it will appear as if an object is standing in the hall, somewhat in the same manner as a mirage, only with the lines more distinctly defined.

The various processes of telescope making, including the grinding of lenses will be demonstrated. There will be a spectroscopic for the analysis of light, and actual illustrations will be given the visitors.

Recording Sunshine

OPTICAL instruments of all types will be on display, and the making of glasses will be demonstrated. A sun recorder will be in operation to show the public how the number of hours of sunshine in a day are recorded at the Gonzales Observatory. A rain recorder also will be installed, while triangulation displays, including hydrogen balloons, and charts will be on view.

Cathode rays will be shown in a vacuum as negative particles of electrons are hurled from one end of a glass tube to another. A direct vision spectrograph will be demonstrated, and the color of various gases, invisible to the naked eye, will be shown by holding glass tubes containing the various gases between two electrical points of a Tesla coil, which boosts the voltage of the ordinary domestic electric current up to 250,000 volts. This instrument in itself is quite interesting.

When I first saw Richard Holmes hold one of these tubes in the stream of electricity jumping from one point to another I thought he would at least be given a shock. If not he would be electrocuted. But he stood there calmly holding the tube while the direct current illumined the gas inside, much in the same manner as a Neon sign is lighted.

New Discovery

THAT these two students are not confining their exhibits to textbook science is ably illustrated by the short wave display they will have. This short wave is a new medical process discovered recently for the developing of a fever condition in patients, by artificially raising the temperature of the person. It can be used for the treatment of pneumonia by speeding up the fever and bringing about the crisis quicker, so that the body will be stronger physically to pass through the crisis. Pneumonia, when left to come to its own crisis, wears the body down so that the patient has little or no vitality left with which to combat the fever. Short wave also may be used in the treatment of malaria and other diseases.

A hydrogen voltmeter display should prove intensely interesting. This exhibit will show how scientists check up on mechanical voltmeters used for measuring volts. The current passes through a container of water, the hydrogen and oxygen are broken up and then measured. By this means the amount of current that was used can be determined.

Wave motions will be described, and sound and light waves will be compared with the ordinary sea waves, so as to clarify the explanation. Thermoelectric control, barometric pressure, and magnetic fields will be other realms of science that will be explored by the public.

Lines of Force

THE lines of force in a magnetic field will be demonstrated by placing iron filings on a sheet of glass, which will be laid on top of a magnetic plate. By bouncing the iron filings and allowing them to come to rest on the glass, the lines of force will be determined as the filings are pulled toward the magnetic fields.

Just how a drop of water is held together is another phenomenon of nature that will be explained in the display dealing with surface tension. The students also will show how water holds up needles and bits of iron on its surface.

Instruments measuring the degree of surface tension of water and other liquids will be on view, and used for the benefit of the public.

The distillation theory will be explained and visitors shown how the micro-condenser is used to distill an amount of Indol as small as one-thirtieth of a millionth of an ounce. Incidentally, this micro-condenser is one that was made by Mr. Holmes in the laboratory at Victoria College, where all the preparatory work for the establishment of the Hall of Science has been conducted.

Interesting Enigma

FOR those interested in jethal gases such as those used during the war, there will be tubes of chlorine, bromine, nitric oxide and other deadly fumes exhibited in glass containers. Also under the heading of physical chemistry will be a display of charging molecules of water with electricity, while the solubility of carboric acid will be tested. In this latter regard there is an interesting enigma. A small quantity of carboric acid will become absorbed in water, while a large quantity of the acid will absorb water. Yet between the small and the large quantities, the exact proportions of which have not been given, there is an entire scale of acid-water proportions that will not unite. This is one of the mysteries of science yet to be solved in some research laboratory.

In charging molecules of water, the student scientists will pour water into an unglazed porcelain dish. By placing electric plates on top and at the bottom of the dish they will make the electric current drag the water through the porcelain.

For those who are more interested in the human anatomy, and other biological departments, there will be a splendid display of biological exhibits, ranging from a collection of human skulls to the skeletons of beasts, reptiles, and even scorpions and tarantulas. Incidentally, while mentioning the latter, I learned that the students have three pet spiders which keep them company during the evenings at the Victoria College laboratory, where they are doing most of their assembling work. They are great big black spiders, and would be quite revolting to most persons. However, the students look upon them in rather a friendly fashion, confident that they can come to no harm, since there is only one spider that is fatally poisonous to a human being, namely, the black, or widow, spider.

Mysteries of Brain

WHILE dealing with the subject of human skulls, it might be well to mention that the students also will have models of human brains showing the many convolutions. They will explain how it is possible for a doctor to make various parts of the body move while a patient is under ether by touching different convolutions with an electric needle. They will explain how it is possible by a delicate operation to take a tiny particle of brain from a certain convulsion so that a man may think many things but never be able to put them in writing unless he acquires the use of his left hand, and the use of this also may be deprived by the same process. One learns that the brain cells that control the left hand are on the right side of the head, and those controlling the right hand on the left side of the head. These and many other interesting facts about the human anatomy will be explained. Charts of the human form, birds, beasts, fish, reptiles and insects will be shown. There will be thirty in all of the most interesting character.

In the section devoted to bacteriology and medical experiments there will be various plates showing different types of bacteria. There also will be microscopes, microtomes, instruments for testing acidity, and other laboratory equipment. Various methods of analysis will be demonstrated in the section devoted to analytical chemistry, while under the heading of synthetic chemistry the students will demonstrate synthesizing adrenalin.

The atom has not been overlooked either, and diagrams illustrating the organization of atoms have been secured. Meteor and lunar exhibits have been arranged, while many other phases of meteorology will be illustrated.

Patient Work

ASSEMBLING of the exhibits for this miniature Hall of Science represents the work of an entire Summer vacation term. The laboratory at Victoria College has been the centre of activity for these students for weeks. There they have labored at glass blowing, making coils and tubes, electric wiring, making Tesla coils and other electrical equipment, assembling various instruments, and mapping out the general plan of the exhibit.

It was here that the delicate operation of lifting the heart from a frog, after it had been killed, was performed while the heart was still beating. A spot or two of adrenalin helped matters along, and kept the heart stimulated until it was deposited in the Ringer's solution, where it will live for goodness knows when.

Several members of the Victoria Astronomical Society are building their own telescopes, including the grinding of their own lenses. This has enabled the students to secure a fine display of this particular branch of the science. Construction of telescopes can be quite practical for the amateur astronomer as the students' exhibit will reveal. Parts of old automobiles and other machinery are used in the construction of the telescopes so that anyone contemplating such an instrument may get some valuable pointers from the display.

Among those to whom the students are indebted for wholehearted support and assistance in their endeavor are: Wilfred R. Hobday, Professor Percy H. Elliott, F. Napier Denison, Lieut.-Commander H. R. Tingley, R.C.N., Dr. J. S. Plaskett, J. Pearce, Boyd Brydon, H. S. Timberlake, J. A. Cunningham, and many members of the Victoria Astronomical Society.

YOU CAN'T FOOL THE STARS

By PHYLLIS DUGANNE

SARAH Lee Valentine had a smudge of charcoal on the end of her nose. When she put up her left hand to rub her left eye, which happened to have a tear in it, she made a second smudge across her cheek bone. In the kitchenette, Caroline, her mother, wearing a ten-cent-store bungalow apron and a string of perfectly matched pearls, was singing softly, "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" while she waited for the grocery boy who might or might not bring something to cook for supper.

Sarah Lee Valentine was afraid of the big bad wolf. He had been crouching against their door entirely too long. She sniffed and drew a long breath and bent again over the drawing-board where two identical fat ladies in their undergarments awaited clothing. Beside the one on the left, was faded for misfortune, her dress, according to the pencil sketch thumb-tacked on the wall in front of Sarah Lee, was entirely wrong, bunched in the worst possible places, destined to make her look shapeless and unattractive. Jesse, not a hair's breadth lighter, was to appear both chic and attractive, in lines cleverly designed to make the best of her figure. Poor Jesse! thought Sarah Lee, and then smugged her right cheek, fiercely. At least Jesse had enough to eat.

The doorbell rang, and Caroline opened the door. Sarah Lee listened tensely to the ascending footsteps, heard her mother's gay voice. "Evening, sonny—put 'em down theah on the table."

Then the grocery boy's voice, ill at ease, apologetic: "I'm sorry, Miss Valentine, but Mr. Burke says can you pay something on the bill tonight?"

CAROLINE's laugh, clear and frank as a child's, drifted back to Sarah Lee. "I declare to the Lawd, sonny, we haven't one cent in this house!" she proclaimed. "You tell Mr. Burke I'm right sorry, and as soon as we get some money—"

"He says he can't let you have anything more until you pay something," said the boy. Sarah Lee winced; from the kitchenette her mother's voice answered, rich and warm: "My land, don't look so upset about it, boy! It isn't yo' fault. You can't even blame Mr. Burke."

You couldn't blame anyone, thought Sarah Lee, but that didn't help. She drew a small neat hat upon Jesse's head. If they were satisfactory, Miss Stevenson would rush her cheque through tomorrow.

The doorbell rang again sharply. "It's probably the sheriff," said Sarah Lee. "Who's theah?" Caroline called down the stair-well. "Why, Peggy West, if this isn't nice!"

Sarah Lee groaned. She could not stop working; that was all there was to it! In the hall, her mother was inviting Peggy to supper. "Of coase you'll stay, honey—we're goin' to have sponobread an' real 'N Orleans coffee an' spiced peaches."

"I can't stay—I have an engagement," said Peggy, sitting down and looking at Sarah Lee with her round blue eyes. "I've just come from having my horoscope read—Claudia King, you know—she's the most marvelous person! She tells you how your planets are arranged and all. She's wonderful!"

"How much," asked Caroline, "does she charge, Peggy?"

"Only twenty-five dollars for a full reading. She really is marvelous. Mrs. Valentine. I think Sarah Lee owes it to herself—"

"Don't use that word!" snapped Sarah Lee. "I'm sensitive about it!"

Caroline looked at her tenderly. "Come on, Peggy, let's go an' me go in the othah room—Sarah Lee's got to get those pictures finished and she's sort of nervous."

Their voices came faintly back through the closed door, the staccato of Peggy's eternal excitement, the soft murmur of Caroline's answers. Sarah Lee finished her work.

BESSIE and Jesse were entirely satisfactory; Miss Stevenson promised that the next work she had. . . . She recognized the panic in Sarah Lee's face. "Look here," she suggested, "Yvonne Miller is looking for some one to do her ads. Why don't you go in and see her?"

"I'll go in and see Miss Miller this afternoon," said Sarah Lee.

Not that there was any use in her going; as she walked back to the apartment, her bag with the cheque inside it clutched tightly under her arm, she knew that it was hopeless.

Caroline received the cheque as though it had been for a million dollars. "Honey, you're so smart! When I think of a little spinlath of a girl like you takin' care of the two of us—!" Her dark eyes were luminous. "I've got somethin' for you, too, lamb."

Sarah Lee wanted to crawl into a closet and sob, when she saw what her mother had done. She stared at the typewritten pages.

"I told Peggy we'd pay her back after you'd made a lot of money—it's really a kind of investment, anyway. Claudia King was real nice to do it so quickly for you." Caroline's voice was husky with excitement. "Look, honey—March third is a special day for you! Anything you touch will succeed an' any love affair—mm-mm!" Her eyes softened.

Sarah Lee kept her lips really mad. "Why—that's fine, Mother. It'll be interesting to see how much of it works out." She straightened her shoulders. "I'm going uptown again, honey. Yvonne Miller needs someone to do some work, and—"

The typewritten pages fluttered in Caroline's hands. "Not today, Sarah Lee! Look at this." She read, conviction mounting in her voice, "—singularly unpropitious arrangement of governing influences. Nothing should be undertaken on this day, especially in business affairs. The plan—"

"Oh, Mother!" Sarah Lee's voice was anguished. "Stop it! Darling, don't you really know that this is all nonsense?"

Caroline shook her head as her daughter stubbornly departed.

Yvonne Miller looked at Sarah Lee's hopelessly woe-begone little oval face, with the big, frightened eyes. "You've had experience in this sort of thing, of course?"

Sarah Lee fought down an inclination to blurt out that she had neither experience nor ability, but she managed to convey the idea, regardless. Miss Miller was sorry. . . .

THERE was nothing of the I-told-you-so quality in Caroline's make-up. She was trying chicken cheerfully when Sarah Lee got home.

After dinner, she looked at her daughter severely.

"You listen to me, Sarah Lee, I've got an idea. There isn't any sense in your gettin' up tomorrow—you just stay in bed an' loaf—but the next day, the third of March—"

She handed Sarah Lee a newspaper. "See what cute pictures Tracy's have in their ads? Why don't you go up theah—day after tomorrow, mind you!—an' tell 'em you'd work for 'em, if they treated you real nice?"

Sarah Lee laughed helplessly. "Mother, was there much insanity in your family?"

It was all so completely crazy that, on the morning of March third, Sarah Lee laughed to herself as she rode uptown.

No, she had no appointment, she was explaining to the secretary of the head of the advertising department—Why, I don't even know the man's name! she admitted cheerfully—when the secretary looked up, and Sarah Lee followed her gaze and took a chance.

"I bet you're him!" she addressed the tall man who had just come in. Caroline's charm was in the tilt of her chin, the slant of her laughing brown eyes. "Aren't you the man who wants to see me about a job?"

"Am I?" he asked, smiling at her. She nodded her head. "I just bet you are!"

Her glee was infectious; Amos Benton, chief of Tracy's advertising department, laughed aloud. "Suppose you come into my office and find out if I think so, too, then," he suggested.

He looked at her drawings carefully. "Pratt?" he answered the telephone. The door opened again. "Hello, Bill—got those layouts? Miss Valentine—Mr. Fuller."

Mr. Fuller looked at Sarah Lee, and Sarah Lee looked at Mr. Fuller. Crazy—but it was a crazy morning—she heard Caroline's lilting voice, "An' any love affair—mm-mm!"

"Look here, Miss Valentine," Amos Benton said abruptly. "I may be able to use you. We've been planning—you've had experience with newspaper ads, of course?"

SARAH Lee looked Mr. Benton unflinchingly in the eye. "I have nevah," she responded, with dignity and literal truth, "had the slightest difficulty with newspaper ads."

Amos Benton nodded absently and shoved her drawings across the desk to Mr. Fuller. "Humor," he stated. "Make 'em smile before they buy. These amusing little sweaters. These cuckoo riding-habits. You know."

Apparently Mr. Fuller knew; in any case, he nodded. "You take Miss Valentine down to your office and see what you can work out together for the sports department Sunday ad. The light touch—"

Sarah Lee crossed her fingers. Mr. Benton appeared to have finished her interview, but she did not know whether she had a job or not. Mr. Fuller's fingers closed on her arm and steered her out of the office. In the corridor he halted and stood, looking down at her with a grin.

"Have you evah?" he inquired, "had the slightest difficulty training tigers, Miss Valentine?"

"None," answered Sarah Lee flatly. "I thought not," said Mr. Fuller, his grin broadening. "We will now go into the silences and see how droll and jocular we can make the offerings of Tracy's sports shop. This side-splitting little tennis frock—this hilarious sun hat—"

"Wear 'em and laugh," suggested Sarah Lee.

Mr. Fuller looked at her appreciatively. "You know, we're going to like each other a lot," he stated.

"You think so?" retorted Sarah Lee.

THE stars moved in their orbits, and true to Claudia King's reading of them, each changing pattern seemed to bring additional forces to augment Sarah Lee's happiness.

Aries, the Ram, was bawling the show; it was now officially Spring, a week to April, and Sarah Lee had worked at Tracy's and known Bill Fuller for nearly a month.

From a bus stop, seated a little closer together than was strictly necessary, they looked up at the sky.

"On such a night as this—" began Bill. "Do you believe in astrology?" Sarah Lee asked, at the same instant.

"Do I look simple?" he retorted. "No."

"I do," murmured Sarah Lee, gazing upward dreamily. She had never told him about her horoscope. Now she poured out the whole story.

"Why, you little idiot!" Bill said. She drew away from him. "A great many more important—and intelligent—people than you believe in it!" she retorted.

"Such as yourself?" he asked. "And my mother," she said firmly. He grinned. "Well—that ought to settle it."

Sarah Lee rose to her feet with dignity, and then sat down ignominiously as Bill grabbed her arm. "Let me alone!"

"Why, Sarah Lee!" His face was startled. "You're not really mad?"

She put up her chin. "When people call me and my mother idiots—" she commenced, and Bill made the mistake of laughing.

"I can't help it," he apologized. "You do look so little and cross!" Anything that he said was wrong; it took him only two more blocks and an assorted dozen conversational attempts to discover that. "All right—be that way if you want to," he said finally, and they rode the rest of the route in strained silence. . . .

"Mother, where did you put my horoscope?" Sarah Lee demanded, as she threw her coat on one chair and her hat on another.

Caroline looked up from an engrossing game of solitaire. "Oh, that o' thing?" she murmured vaguely. "Must be somewhere about."

Sarah Lee looked at her sternly. "Where is it?"

Caroline sighed. "You been fightin' with Bill," she stated.

Sarah Lee stuck to her issue. "Where is it?"

"Reckon it's in the desk," said her mother. "I can always tell when you've been fightin'."

Sarah Lee—you look just like yo' father."

Sarah Lee said nothing, because she was reading.

"A time of trouble and disappointment," read Sarah Lee. "Petty irritations may easily become magnified and—"

"I wouldn't pay a bit of attention to it," said her mother.

Petty irritations were magnified right and left—proving conclusively to Sarah Lee that a hundred million stars could not be wrong. But duty the big bad planet that was causing all the trouble moved on its orbit, and Sarah Lee apologized to Bill, and Bill accepted her apology, with a funny look in his slanting eyes.

"I wouldn't let a star throw me like that," he told her.

Sarah Lee smiled forgivingly. "Let's go up to Central Park and feed an' annoy the animals, after work," she changed the subject. Outside the office that evening, Bill told her what was up. Benton was leaving Tracy's to start his own agency, and he wanted Bill to come along with him.

Dangerous Forties

"JIM," said I, "I'm forty today!"
 "Bless yer heart," said Jimmie Frise.
 "Forty, the dangerous age!"
 "I've heard that expression," said I. "I wonder what they mean by it."

"They mean," said Jim, looking at me gravely, "that a man has to watch his step when he is forty. He is liable to go wrong. The expectations of his mature manhood are starting to lose their power. He gets restless, seeing life quietly slipping by, and if he is not watching, he is liable to burst out. So they say."

"You're forty, Jim?"
 "And well past."

"Has anything dangerous happened to you?"
 "Nary a thing," said Jim, with the air of a man who had perhaps been on the lookout for this and that. "But I am young for my age. I'll be forty when I am sixty."

"Well," said I, "it's nice to think of a little danger lurking around. All morning, I have been feeling a little proud of being forty, and while I don't want you to think I am getting romantic in my old age, I will confess I have thought of this dangerous stuff a few times. But I guess there's nothing in it."

"Sure, there's plenty in it," said Jim. "From now on, you've got to watch your step. Look at all the romantic movie heroes—are they these young squirts? No, sir! Lionel Barrymore, John Barrymore, Clive Brook and the rest; they're all in their forties or even their fifties. There is something very fascinating about a man after he has got over his conceit, and that's usually about forty."

"I'm a devoted family man," said I.
 "All the more risky," said Jim. "It comes on you all the more unexpectedly."

"Fah," said I, straightening my tie and patting some of the wrinkles out of my vest. "It's one of those old sayings supposed to give a little kick in life to birds like you and me that are starting to get hardening of the knuckles. Let's have lunch together today, Jim, and let's go somewhere else than the old familiar quick and dirty. Being my birthday, I'll treat you to a fancy lunch."

So Jim and I went to lunch to the biggest and swellest hotel in the city. We didn't go down to the grill, but marched right into the big dining-room, where neither of us had been before. And being forty, I let the way in with that air that I have noticed men of forty using, an air of being utterly unaware that there is anybody else in the big room.

We were unable to have a table for two, so we sat opposite each other at a table for four. We had just nicely got our meal ordered when the captain of the waiters leaned over and said:

"Gentlemen, do you mind if a couple of ladies sit at your table? We are so crowded today."

Jim and I looked startled at each other. Jim winked.

"All right," said I.

And the head waiter led over two of the most dashing young ladies you ever saw in your life. Not the kind I would take home to show my boys, exactly. But the kind you see so many of at lunch. They sat down demurely, and while I saw one staring Jimmie up and down, I knew the other one was taking me in. But they had that modern expressionless face, and they ordered their dinner.

It is difficult to hold conversation across a table with strangers enfilading you.

"As I was saying," said I in a firm voice across to Jimmie, "I think Bennett ought . . ."

And with the serious air of gentlemen of forty odd, we debated the state of affairs. In between, in little, soft voices, the two girls exchanged a few inscrutable remarks, nibbled their light lunch like rabbits, which is another modern mannerism I don't see much sense to. I would like to take their heads at the back and shove their faces down into their plates. But after an awkward twenty minutes they finished their luncheon and departed.

"A Swell Dame to See You"

"THERE," said Jim. "Five or six half-empty tables in the room, yet they come and sit at ours. I bet you they asked that head waiter to sit them with us."

"We'll ask him on the way out," said I. And when we checked out, I said to the captain: "Tell us something: did those two girls ask to sit at our table?"

"On the contrary," said the captain of the waiters.

"How do you mean?"

"They said to me as they went out, sir, begging your pardon: 'What's the idea of putting us at that table with those two deacons? That's what they said, sir.'"

When we got outside, I said:

"There you are, Jim. I bet that saying about the dangerous age was invented by a fellow about forty-one."

"You wait," warned Jimmie. "Don't be too sure."

I left Jim to attend to a couple of interviews with big executives and so forth, and when I got back to the office Jimmie was all excited.

"Bay," he cried, "this is uncanny. The swellest dame you ever saw, looks like a prima donna or something, was waiting here for you. She says she has been wanting to meet you for years. Reads all your articles. Has heard so much about you. And she just wouldn't put it off any longer. So she is coming back in half an hour."

"Get out!"

"It's a fact," said Jim. "Here you are, forty today, and already the place is swarming with vamps."

There was a tap on the door, and a large, luscious lady stood before us.

She swept forward magnificently, her right hand held high. She was speechless. She bit her lower lip as she took my hand, and rolled her eyes up.

"I've waited for this for years!" she cried in a rich voice. "Don't tell me I have interrupted you in the actual work of preparing one of your articles!"

"No, ma'am; yes, ma'am," said I. And Jim kicked me on the shin because I was backing up right into the waste basket.

I dusted off my extra chair. She sat down and just stared. She sighed and gasped and around here who needs a dictionary is Mr. Frise, and if he had one it would ruin his cartoons."

"But," gushed the contralto Venus, "don't tell me a writing man has no need for works of reference. Don't tell me his articles would not be vastly improved if he were to have a handy set of books covering the complex field of nature, industry and human affairs!"

I looked sharply at the handsome lady. Out of her large handbag projected what looked like the corner of a pad of order forms and a pencil.

"I have an appointment," I said, rising hurriedly. "I'm sorry."

"Just one moment," exclaimed the lady. "I wanted to show you the prospectus of a marvellous new work of up-to-the-minute information on every conceivable topic of human interest, a work in ten volumes, lavishly illustrated . . ."

"Madam," I cried in my forty-year-old voice, "I do not wish to see it under any circumstances."

"A man of your standing . . ." she cried. "Please!" I shouted.

"Bigger men than you . . ." she shrieked. "Good afternoon," I roared, and fled from the room and hid in the washroom.

"An Admirer of Yours"

IN ten minutes, when I ventured back, Jimmie had signed for a set of the books.

"No, ma'am," said I. "The only person

Unsupported Stairway Puzzling Architects

UNIQUE in a dozen details, the marvel of engineers who have traveled far to inspect it and leave in wonder again, there stands in the old stone Court House in Saint John, N.B., a spiral staircase, unsupported by pillar or post. It has no equal on the continent.

Sweeping around in symmetric curves, it ascends two full stories from the ground floor. Upwards of 100 tons of stone were used in the making of the evenly spaced steps which some genius placed one upon the other in perfect spiral curves circling an open well several feet in width.

Almost as great a wonder as the unsupported stairway is its railing, richly fashioned of hand-wrought iron by skilled craftsmen of decades ago.

Such handicraft is rare today and architects from all parts of Canada and the United States delight in its beauty, an adornment, they say, of which there is no equal.

When the interior of the building was demolished by fire several years ago, and the roof fell prey to the flames, city fathers pondered whether to rebuild the structure, but the stairs stood grim and sentinel-like, a reminder of the careful work of the builder. They defied time and fire and weather.

The municipality decided to rebuild, and today the structure is one of the most ornamental in New Brunswick.

Architects, while puzzled over certain facts concerning the staircase, are agreed to some extent that they get their support on the very curve of the spiral. The ends of the slabs appear to be embedded in the walls of stone from which they rise, but this has been proven as impossible as in the landings the pinnings of the stone slabs can be easily discerned.

He was just saying, "Miss Marsh, I wonder . . ."

" . . . when she opened her handbag to find the key of the stamp box. The words died on his lips. He mumbled, paused, and suddenly finished. . . . I wonder if you'd mind posting these letters on your way home."

He was like a drunken man suddenly sobered. He walked into his office and shut the door, then on an impulse he picked up the telephone.

"Margaret? Come and meet me for dinner west, old girl. Yes, come on, Miggs . . . the change'll do us both good."

A little sheepish grin stole over his face as he put down the telephone.

And Miss Marsh, her brown eyes bigger than ever in her bewilderment, put back the odd papers she had removed from her handbag in her search for the key, without the least idea of the part which had been played by the letter from Aunt Alice she'd found so handy that morning for trying her curling irons.

With one record, he says, it would be possible to play the entire Ringgold.

He has not worked out how many times it would be necessary to wind up the gramophone.

A Pair of Curling Irons

By OLIVE P. BARRETT

"MARGARET, must you use my morning paper for your curling irons?" James Marsden rumbled the offending paper angrily, and, tossing it ostentatiously on one side, proceeded to eat his breakfast in a state of silent indignation which boded ill for the digestion.

As usual, the coffee in his wife's voice was mixed with a note of complete amazement. You would have thought she had never in her life done such a thing before.

"Today's paper? Oh, I'm sorry, Jim; I thought it was yesterday's."

She picked up the discarded paper, with a futile effort to smooth out the tell-tale line of pale brown crinkles which disfigured the white edges. Then she took her place at the table and busied her plump hands with the coffee pot. Half milk half coffee, and two big lumps of sugar—exactly how he best liked it.

Poor old Jim! What a fidget he always was about those curling irons of hers! And she had quite thought it was yesterday's paper, too.

Mustn't do it again, though—he did get so cross. . . . Remember to keep some scrap paper handy, and put it on the fire as soon as she had used it.

For eighteen years Margaret had been making this same resolution. Her pleasant, middle-aged face relaxed into its usual easy-going expression, and the incident slid from her mind.

But James Marsden's irritation remained this morning. He looked across at his wife and felt it growing on him. She was trying to beguile him into conversation with her soft, faintly Irish voice.

" . . . Oh, Jim—you'll not forget to write a line for Winfred's birthday tomorrow, now, will you? I'll be sending the child's present off today with a card from the two of us, but she'd like a word from her father on her sixteenth birthday."

Winfred's sixteenth birthday! That was where it had started—the little pinprick of unrest. There had been something in the day that had taken hold of him the moment he had opened his eyes.

An unexpected, sparkling day, a late Autumn miracle, coming after a week of unrelieved fog and rain. There was a tang in the air that was more disturbing than the fluttering expectancy of Spring.

And then Margaret, slipping her early morning tea, with her shingle cap a little askew, had reminded him of Winfred's sixteenth birthday.

"How time flies! We're getting old, Jim."

Complacently from the lazy comfort of her pillows she spoke.

But he was pricked by her words. They turned the delicious promise of the day into a taunt. Getting old! He patted his waistline surreptitiously, and took a glance at himself in the long mirror.

Was he getting fatter? Was it only his imagination, or were those trousers just a shade tighter than they'd been when he'd bought them? Old? He remembered in a sudden panic that he would be forty-six next birthday.

He looked at Margaret, risen now, and struggling, with a frank effort, into her corsets. A middle-aged woman! Her short, graying hair, relieved of the net which kept it in place at night, was jagged here and there with little limp ends which had lost their curl.

She pulled her frock over her head and was off to heat her curling irons in the breakfast-room fire while he was wrestling with his tie.

Getting old! Yes, but it was a well-known fact that women aged sooner than men. He checked the thought guiltily as a disloyalty, but he was faintly reassured.

The episode of the morning paper was the culminating point of all his irritation. For eighteen years he had endured in his wife this habit that he loathed. At first he had made a joke of it, had teased her about it. Then gradually it had ceased to be amusing, until it had become definitely a source of annoyance.

Envelopes, stray letters, newspapers, anything which her hand fell on, she would seize to try the heat of her curling irons. For eighteen years his eyes had been offended by scraps of paper twisted into a row of crinkles.

Charred dark brown first, then paler and paler, down to the colorless mark which announced that the irons were no longer hot enough to burn.

It suddenly seemed to him now, in his completely humorless frame of mind, that she had wrecked their marriage with her curling irons.

He pushed back his chair with a harsh, scraping sound.

"I wish you'd get out of that damn slovenly habit," he flung at her, and left her staring with hurt amazement after him.

It had to be this morning that little Miss Marsh, his typist, chose to deposit on his desk a bunch of golden chrysanthemums.

He was aware of them, with a strange thrill, as soon as he got into the room. She had arranged them with such obvious care, too, and when, a little awkwardly, he thanked her for them, and commented on the delightful garden she must have, she looked at him with her big brown eyes in a way that was more reassuring to his masculine pride than anything that had happened that morning.

"I was afraid you might be annoyed with me for bringing them," she said in a little voice.

Annoyed with her! The funny little thing! He wondered why in the world he had never before noticed the amazing length of her eyelashes. He found himself watching her when she came in to take his letters. Once their eyes met, and he felt his heart give a queer jump.

At lunch-time he remembered Winfred's letter. He gave it to Miss Marsh to post. But when he told her, lightly, that it was Winfred's sixteenth birthday, she refused to believe that he wasn't joking.

For a whole year this delightful young woman had been in his office. Had he been blind, deaf, bewitched, all this time? He walked to his lunch with a swing. Gosh, it was good to be young. Young? Why, of course. At forty-five he was in his prime.

By tea-time he knew he was in love. Delicately mad as that belongs to youth. When he asked her to stay a little later and take some letters he knew that he was going to take her out to dinner, and that she would go.

Miss Marsh, the light of conquest in her big eyes, knew, too. She sat tap-tapping away at his letters in the general office, and she knew that presently he would come out, clear his throat a little awkwardly, and tell her that he was at a loose end this evening . . . would she take pity on him?

When he came out she was taking the last letter out of the typewriter. He leaned over her to read it through, and her fluffy chestnut hair brushed lightly against his cheek.

He was just saying, "Miss Marsh, I wonder . . ."

" . . . when she opened her handbag to find the key of the stamp box. The words died on his lips. He mumbled, paused, and suddenly finished. . . . I wonder if you'd mind posting these letters on your way home."

New Search for Gold Sunk in Vigo Bay in 1702

AN attempt to salvage gold estimated to be worth $140,000,000, which was contained in the strong rooms of thirteen Spanish galleons, sunk in the Bay of Vigo in 1702 after a desperate engagement with a squadron of 150 English and Dutch warships, is to be made soon.

Seven previous attempts have been made to salvage the treasure which the galleons are supposed to have carried from the West Indies, but all that has been brought to the surface are a few guns, some ammunition and a box of coins of small value.

Now the Spanish Government has granted a concession to a Spanish military engineer, Senor Manuel Moxo, to make the eighth attempt to bring the treasure to the surface. Previous salvage attempts were made by English, Swedish, French, Spanish and Italian divers.

Philip V was on the throne of Spain when thirteen Spanish galleons, commanded by Don Manuel de Velasco, and escorted by twenty-three French warships, set sail from the West Indies for Spain bringing the treasure of the New World.

Beaten by British

THE fleet arrived at Cadix, where they were to have unloaded, only to find that the combined English and Dutch fleets were laying siege to the port. Admiral Renault, commander of the French escort, suggested that the treasure should be unloaded at a French port, but this the Spanish commander was unwilling to do. It was finally agreed that the vessels should shelter in Vigo Bay.

Despite warning, the admiral brought his fleet into the tiny cove of San Simón. Then he threw a rampart across the narrow strait, leaving the French escort on the other side.

While the work of unloading was still in progress, on October 23, the English and Dutch warships appeared, sailing up the estuary and engaging the French.

The battle raged all day before the French escort was defeated. French and Spaniards saw that it was impossible to save the gold and ordered that the treasure ships be set on fire.

One galleon managed to escape and reach San Lázaro. Five were captured by the English.

GREGORY CLARK

"What's the matter with you?" I demanded.

"Well," said Jim, lamely, "you can't throw a lady bodily out of your office."

"I can," said I, grimly.

"The dangerous age," said Jim. "Where did you hide?"

"In about the only place they can't chase you," said I. "Why didn't you tip me off she was an agent?"

"How could I tell?"

"Fshaw!" said I. "Why else would a swell lady like that come to see us?"

"She said she was an admirer of yours."

"I wish," said I, wistfully, "I was either thirty or fifty and get this over."

At four o'clock Jim and I went down to the cafe for tea, as we often do, to argue about life and laughter, and Aggie, our usual waitress, was absent. A new and young thing was there, very level eyed, very competent.

"Tea," said I.

She brought two pots and two little nibbles of cream.

"More cream," I commanded, shortly. "And lemon for me."

"More cream?" inquired the new girl, sweetly. "For whom?"

"Mr. Frise takes four creams," I said, "and I take lemon. Bring me half a lemon."

All this would be needless if Aggie were there.

"We generally serve a slice of lemon with tea," said the new girl with the level eyes.

"I said a half, and two more creams, please."

Jim and I looked at each other, thinking how easily little things can throw life all out of gear. How important it is, at forty anyway, to have things cut and dried.

"Them two old weasels over there," said the new waitress to the counter clerk.

"Sssssshhhhh!" hissed the counter man and four or five regular waitresses.

Because we "are" friends of the proprietor.

So without so much as a scared look, the new girl competently and prettily laid down the cream and lemon and swirled gracefully away.

"Two old weasels," said Jim.

"Somehow," said I, "this is the flattest birthday I have ever had."

"If your forties come in like a lamb, they'll go out like a lion," said Jim. "Wait and see."

So I went home, determined to be a dangerous guy around my own house. When I opened the door, the odor of a great birthday dinner in preparation greeted me and all my boys were lying on their stomachs on the living-room floor over the comics.

"Here, you chaps," I growled dangerously, "how many times have I given instructions that you're to do your comics up in your own room? Get up! Scat!"

The lady of the house appeared from the dining-room.

"Now, now," she said. "On your birthday. Is that the way to talk to your sons? Let's have a pleasant dinner."

The boys turned their heads back to the comics on the floor.

I went upstairs and doiled up, put on a fresh shirt, my maroon house jacket, and came downstairs with my shoulders back and my step springy.

My lady I found in the dining-room, surveying the pretty table.

"Well, my dear," said I, taking her shoulders and facing her to me. "I have started my forty-first year!"

She patted my head and smiled.

"You need a haircut," she said. "Get it tomorrow."

So after dinner I retired to my den and got out my album and looked for an hour through the snapshots, some of which show me when I was twenty-one.

With gold worth $400,000 on board, and the other thirteen were sunk.

Among the seven previous attempts to salvage the treasure were two by Englishmen. One, named Evans, found some coins in 1766, and the other, Dickson, in 1825, brought to the surface a brigantine in which the only articles of value were some silver dishes. The last attempt, made by an Italian, failed in August, 1930, after three years of work.

Terrific Heat Causes Death of Thousands of Fish in Seine

FOR the second time this Summer Parisians have been surprised and distressed to see thousands and thousands of fish, dead or dying, floating on the surface of the Seine as it pursued its winding course to the sea. In each case the reason was the same: the terrific heat.

Scientists say that when the temperature reaches a certain height the river does not furnish the requisite quantity of oxygen (four milligrams per litre) to keep the fish alive. Another expert explains that the heat causes the weeds at the bottom of the river to give out fœtid emanations which are fatal to fish life.

Whatever the explanation, the many amateur fishermen who are such a feature of the landscape in and around Paris are in despair. One authority suggests that 800 tons of ice thrown into the Seine would restore its waters to health. The difficulty is to persuade someone to shoulder the expense. The Municipality refuses. The fishermen's association is not rich enough. And so there we are, with the river polluted, no fish to catch, and no hope of an amelioration of the situation until the Autumn brings cooler weather.

Garden Week by Week

By N. W. F. RANT, F.R.H.S.

THIS is an excellent time of the year to check up on our gardens. If one would take notes on paper (mental notes are not good enough) when the time comes around next season, needed alterations or improvements are not neglected.

A gap here and there which could have been filled, or an alteration for the improvement of a color scheme would be done at the right time and one's conscience would be all the clearer for having taken the note.

On the whole, Victoria gardens have never looked better and, judging from our last Summer show, held by the Victoria Horticultural Society, quantity and size of bloom lacked nothing to be desired.

The Useful Dahlia

THERE is no doubting the fact that the dahlia is a most useful plant. It may be used as a filler, provided judgment is used as regards size of flower, and height of the plant is taken into consideration. This year dahlias did not reach their maximum height. They were no sooner planted than they came into bloom.

Writing of dahlias one always seems to associate that vile pest, which we have fallen heir to, the earwig. When planting a dahlia root, instead of leaving that pipe stem attached to the tuber, it should be taken off below ground level. If left on it just becomes an ideal home for the earwig. Of course, if used separately it can become a fine trap; if taken up and shaken into hot water a wholesale killing can be effected.

Another favorite plant of this pest is the chrysanthemum. It is not wise to take cuttings into the house without inspecting beforehand. They live on the outside petals of the flower. In fact, they eat the whole plant when the plants are young. As the bloom has been so early this year they seem to have left the foliage for the flower.

It is a question whether the poison bait that we are using is as effective as we think. No doubt the pests disappear from the area where bait is laid for a time. We only have them in our gardens now, but unless we are all on the war path incessantly, it will not be long before they are in our houses, and then?

A Color Combination

REVERTING to our subject, at the beginning of this article, here is a check-up on an absolutely perennial border which the writer has in mind. It may not be an ideal color scheme, but bloom there is.

As a background there are Thalictrum dipscarpum, helenium, delphinium. Showing second bloom, anemones in three shades of blue, echinops rita, a thistle flower, tall spikes of Hyacinthus candicans, white, some bronze mums, bronze early buttercups and clumps of tiger lily. This background is a predominance of blue and gold.

For a body, or centre filling, there are geums, in second bloom, pyrethrum in second bloom, clumps of gladioli in various colors, lilacs spicata, veronica such as longifolia, subserotina and exaltata, etc. Fall anemones, black-eyed Susans, Gentiana asclepias, some epimedium are used more as foliage plants, and epimedium macrantha, which are very effective.

Several plants which are very effectively used in this border are the Campanula lactiflora. One must have a wide border to be able to carry this plant as it eventually will attain a height of six or seven feet, and at least two to three feet across.

For the foreground there is in bloom a mixed edging of Viola Jersey Gem and Viola Gunner Thompson, the purples and gold being very delightful; Hucheras in second bloom and the dwarf geum Heidreichii, some late-blooming pinks and carnations and dwarf early mums in yellow and white go to make up the foreground.

Strictly speaking, the gladioli are the only flowers which should not be classed as a perennial in this border. It only goes to show, though, that even at this time of year a border may be had which will do the owner justice if systematically planned and planted.

Early Asters

THERE are still the tall and dwarf perennial asters included in this border to come into bloom. In fact, by now there is no doubt that the aster "King George" will be in bloom and very shortly all the pinks and blues will follow.

This is certainly an unprecedented year for second bloom. Usually the second bloom is not nearly as strong as the original, but this year nearly all plants that bloomed anywhere from early June to the end of June are flowering again just as strongly. After all the weeping and walling over early bloom, it has not been without its reward.

Alpine and rock plants, even though perhaps a month to six weeks earlier in their bloom, are not going to make up for it, with the exception of subretia, which, if it has been cut back after its first bloom, is now showing signs of a second flowering.

Heathers in Bloom

THE glory of heathers is with us again with a rush. In the last two weeks, besides the bell heathers, both white and red, there are several varieties of cinerea or Scotch heather in bloom. The white Ling calluna vulgaris and the Cornish heath is just appearing.

One cannot write of heathers without a pang of heartache for our late Provincial Librarian, John Hosie. His inborn love for the heather was well known and he was taken when there was so much of his beloved heath in all its glory.

Choice of Color

NOW is the time to take note of change of color, among the shrubs especially.

Mulch Paper Aids Cucumber Growth

Cucumbers, Melons, Squash and Pumpkin Grow Well on the Saanich Peninsula, Especially if Mulch Paper is Used. This Photograph, Taken at the Dominion Experimental Station at Saanichton, Shows Cucumbers Growing Both With and Without Mulch Paper. Note the Inferior Growth of the Plants That Have Not the Advantage of the Mulch Paper.

The Berberis are beginning to show their Autumn tints and, living as we do among a great variety of shrubs, one notices the change of color from day to day.

For fall coloring one of the most effective group of plants is the Nandina domestica. If they happen to be carrying panicles of the fruit-forming flowers so much the better.

A question is so often asked as to why the aucuba does not berry. This shrub, like a great many others, will not berry unless both male and female plants are grouped together. When these shrubs are imported they usually all carry fruit. They very shortly lose their berry-bearing habit.

Nurseries now have found it necessary to import male plants to intermingle with their stock. These plants may now be had separately and it will pay those gardeners who have plantings of the aucuba to purchase the male plant. The difference between a berry-bearing plant and one without, makes it worth the while.

Boys and Girls Show Fine Jersey Calves at Pender Island

AN additional attraction of much interest to the annual fair held at Pender Island this year, was the showing of Jersey calves by boys and girls. There were nine entrants and A. W. Aylard, president of the B.C. Jersey Breeders' Association, was on hand as judge. He found his task no easy one to place the winners. His final selection was as follows:

First—Eric Grimmer, showing a calf sired by Babacombe Blondes Blindie, out of Maplelawn Mariposa, who gave 505 pounds butterfat, as a two-year-old.

Second—Bunty Grimmer, whose calf was also sired by Babacombe Blondes Blindie, out of Edehurst Ann, who is a granddaughter of that outstanding bull Glamorgan Crown Prince.

Third—Elmer Bowerman, grade calf.

Fourth—(Very highly commended) Bob Hamilton, with a calf whose sire was Bofedere Volunteer, out of Maplelawn Dream.

It was most gratifying to note the very considerable interest shown by the boys and girls in the contest and the event will be an annual one, with promise of considerable growth.

Several Jersey breeders from Saanich took advantage of the opportunity to visit Pender Island. Besides Mr. Aylard, the following were on hand: H. E. Burbridge, vice-president of the B.C. Jersey Breeders' Association, and the secretary, J. S. Braidwood; George Sangster, Reg. Thompson, A. H. Lee and J. H. Kingdom, the latter of Saltspring Island.

After the judging, a visit of inspection was paid to the herds of Nat Grimmer, Percy Grimmer and Vic Menzies. These herds, among the first in British Columbia, continue to show outstanding quality and type, and are well worthy of a visit.

Japanese Wheat Crop

THE Japanese wheat crop of this year is estimated at 44,491,150 bushels. It is considered that the annual consumption of wheat is about 45,000,000 bushels, so that the five-year plan instituted two years ago by the Japanese Government to grow sufficient wheat for domestic purposes seems to be almost attained in the second year of the attempt.

Shading with reinforced cheesecloth having a thread count of twenty-two by twenty-two in experiments at Cornell University increased the length of stem and size of flower of all varieties. Asters, chrysanthemums, snapdragons, calendulas, sweet peas and dahlias were among the most benefited. Insect injury was decreased.

Advocates Great Show of Growing Bulbs in Victoria

Every letter passing through the post offices of Holland is stamped with the words, "Visit the Flower Exhibition in the Spring of 1935."

By DIRK VAN DER BENT

THE year 1935 is going to be an important one for the bulb growers of Holland, for next Spring the World Flower Exhibition will be held in Heemstede, Holland. To those whose business centres around the production and distribution of bulbs, this event will be of as great importance as was the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference of 1933 to the producers of the great grain-growing areas of the world.

Arrangements for the World Flower Exhibition are well advanced. A large park, about 600 acres in extent, is available and several hundred individual growers are now being allotted their respective areas. In other words they are staking their claims preparatory to developing them into a composite mass of exquisite beauty, which visitors from all over the world will behold.

Gold Mine to Growers

THIS world flower show will doubtless prove a veritable gold mine to the bulb growers of Holland and the plan contains a suggestion, which might well be adopted in British Columbia even on a small scale.

The Dutch bulb industry is of vital importance to the people of Holland because they have made it so. Holland is not blessed with climatic or soil conditions superior to those of Vancouver Island; in fact the conditions in this part of the Pacific Northwest are even more suitable for bulb growing than they are in Western Europe.

British Columbia can become an important bulb growing area and the people of Vancouver Island especially have an opportunity for advertising their bulbs that is not enjoyed to any greater degree by the growers in Holland.

Would Be Great Attraction

ALREADY the Coast section of British Columbia has been widely advertised for its many attractions and tourists come here by the thousands every year. Many of these tourists come in the Spring simply because of our delightful climate and the opportunity that a visit to this part of the country affords the people of the less favored sections to escape from the rigors of winter and discomforts of Spring for a brief period. If properly organized a Spring bulb show, patterned after the one in Holland, would prove not only an additional tourist attraction, but a remarkably fine advertisement for British Columbia-grown bulbs.

The City of Victoria offers a most suitable location for such a show and the growers of Vancouver Island and the Coast districts have sufficient quantities of the desirable varieties of bulbs to make a very satisfactory initial showing. It is not necessary to start in a large way. A small beginning on a single block of two to five acres, of what is at present idle land, would serve the double purpose of delighting visitors to the Coast and advertising our product.

An Outdoor Supplement

THERE are held in British Columbia every Spring a considerable number of flower shows, where bulbs of many kinds are placed on display. The display is excellent while it lasts, but is of brief duration. An outdoor show of bulbs would last several weeks and could be so managed as to supplement the competitive indoor bulb show, which is sponsored by horticultural enthusiasts in our capital city.

Growing Squash, Melons and Cucumbers for Seed

By E. M. STRAIGHT

(Supt. Dominion Experimental Station, Saanichton)

THE production of seed from cucumbers, squash, pumpkins, melons and like plants has much in common. If one knows the story as to how seeds of one species, cucumbers for example, are obtained, dried, cleaned, etc., he knows fairly well how to proceed with others.

The cucumber, though not of outstanding food value, has come into universal favor. Its importance in the pickle industry as a fresh vegetable is well known. More than one hundred and thirty-five thousand acres are planted to this one crop alone in the United States, hence cucumber seed is in great demand.

The choice of variety is quite important in the seed industry as when vegetables are grown for food purposes first hand. On the southern end of Vancouver Island select strains of Davis Perfect are used both in the garden and for forcing, while the Boston Pickling is well thought of by the pickle manufacturers. The long green and white spine are used almost exclusively in some parts of the country.

Grow Only One Variety

CUCUMBERS are so easily cross-pollinated, and this is true of all the cucurbits, that there must be at least forty rods between seed fields of different varieties. It is much better, however, if the grower produces seed of the one variety only of each species on the one farm. Otherwise some surprises may await him.

The soil, for best success with cucumbers and similar plants, should not be too light. We prefer a loam or clay loam. Plow in early season and fit thoroughly. Several harrowings before the seed is sown will destroy multitudes of weeds most difficult to remove later on. All of the cucurbits demand manure or fertilizer in generous quantities. If any danger should exist in as far as the seed born diseases are concerned, some disinfectant may be used as a means of control.

In Hills or Drills

CUCUMBERS are planted both in hills and in drills. The hills may be spaced four by four feet. If planted in drills the rows should be at least five feet apart. Ample seed should be sown in order to obtain a perfect stand. If by any chance more plants present themselves than are wanted, they may easily be removed. The seed should not be covered more than three-quarters of an inch deep, but packing the surface soil with the foot or hoe is a good practice as it induces soil moisture to rise and consequently helps in the germinating of the seed.

Insect pests of these crops on Vancouver Island are few, and scarcely worthy of mention, but in Eastern Canada the striped cucumber beetle and the twelve spotted beetle are always met with, and do considerable damage.

The cultivation of the crop should be thorough, not only to remove weeds but to maintain perfect tilth. If one waits until the great majority of the fruits are ripe, the harvest may be completed at one operation.

Obtaining the Seed

CERTAIN machines have been devised to crush the fruit, and revolving wire-mesh cylinders to separate the seed and juice from the coarse rind. The seed is then fermented in casks or vats until the pulpy coating of the seed is broken down. Wash the seed when properly fermented until quite clean. The seed may be dried by spreading thinly on cloth covered frames exposed to the sun. During the drying the seed should be agitated from time to time and gently rubbed between the hands. This will greatly improve the appearance of the finished product. When thoroughly dry the seed must be cleaned by means of a framing mill.

Melons, squash, pumpkins, etc., are handled in much the same way for seed purposes. Correct cultural methods must be observed for each individual species of course, as for example: the squash, if planted on good soil, should be ten feet apart each way, but the general line of procedure from the standpoint of the seed producer is the same. We have pointed out that some surprises may await the best growers, however, for with the utmost care, some strangers may be found in every crop.

Breeding Programme of Sidney Jersey Breeders Is Advancing

ANOTHER link has been forged in the breeding programme of the Sidney Jersey Breeders with the completion of the tour of the Mainland herds by the selection committee.

The basis of their breeding programme, built upon the principles of Mendelism as supported by practical results, is borne out in the wonderful achievement of the Jersey cow, Brampton Basilia, and the battery of bulls to be used in the breeding programme is of similar line-breeding as the world's record cow, she being a granddaughter and great granddaughter of Oxford Sultan of Oaklands.

It may be noted here that the dam of Oxford Sultan of Oaklands is a three-quarter sister in blood to the English bull, Goddington Noble, one of whose sons sired Wagga Gladys, the Australian cow, whose position as world's Jersey champion, with a record of 1,250 pounds of butterfat in 365 days, has now been surrendered to Brampton Basilia. The accomplishments of these outstanding cows goes to show the possibilities of that wonderful piece of machinery known as the Jersey cow.

The Sidney Jersey Breeders' Committee had the good fortune of being accompanied by O. C. Evans, honorary president of the B.C. Jersey Breeders and an outstanding judge and breeder of Jersey cattle.

Object of Tour

THE object of the tour was to line up bull prospects for the bull exchange project for which the club owes its inception. The survey confirmed the wisdom of the executive committee in selecting the island bull and progeny winner, Oxford Sultan of Oaklands as the blood line to perpetuate and retain.

A careful study of the extended pedigrees of showing ring and production winners gives a generous reputation of this great bull's name, and lends strength to the belief that this grand old monarch of the breed is truly homogenous in character and nearly approaches purity in his propensity to transmit the desired quality to his progeny. Oxford Sultan of Oaklands is a winner of the bull and progeny prize over the Island of Jersey, an honor that comes to few bulls. The winning of this coveted honor was not only duplicated by his son and grandson but the same honor fell to his sire and grand sire before him. His line-bred granddaughter Brampton Basilia, has won for Canada the world's championship for production with 1,312.8 pounds of butterfat and 19,012.3 pounds of milk in 365 days.

Good Prospects Listed

A NUMBER of very good bull prospects, rich in the blood of Oxford Sultan of Oaklands were listed by the Sidney club's committee. These included the $2,000 son of Oxford Sultan of Oaklands, namely Blooms Oxford Sultan (from a daughter of Xenia's Sultan).

The University of British Columbia herd sire, a son of La Sentas Oxford Coronation by Oxford Sultan of Oaklands is being used to follow a line-bred Oxford Sultan of Oaklands bull.

Another very promising prospect was a son of Imp. Signals Pride, out of Volunteer Forward, being line-bred through Forward and Xenia Sultan.

A purchase of one of the aforementioned bulls is proposed in the near future and an option secured on a son of the gold medal cow, Glamorgan Arisana Bale, daughter of Dreaming Sultan, a son of the old monarch, at present in service at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Summerland.

First Bull Is Chosen

BOWLIN'S Xenia's Oxford, reserve junior champion at Vancouver last year, and herd sire of the Heather Farm Jersey Herd, and full brother to the late herd sire of the University of British Columbia, has been chosen as the first bull to go in service under the breeding programme, he being a grandson, great grandson and great, great grandson through Bowlin's Oxford Sultan, Xenia's Sultan and Oxford Sultan of Oaklands.

The principal lesson learned as the result of this survey was the paramount importance of animal hygiene and freedom from breeding troubles.

The association can vision the future Saanich Peninsula as a breeding area, supervised by the Federal Health of Animals Branch, with absolute freedom from such diseases as T.B., contagious abortion, foot rot, mastitis, etc., and it is with considerable satisfaction that the Sidney Jersey Breeders, though still just an infant, see confirmation of their policies by the American Jersey Cattle Club in their recommendation and acceptance by the United States Government of official bloodtesting of dairy herds by the Federal Government.

A live animal weighing 1,300 pounds, well finished, will yield a dressed carcass of 700 pounds. Of this, there are only 200 pounds of really prime beef. The prime beef is made up of the sirloin, porterhouse and club steaks, and the prime ribs of the forequarters.

Canada's World-Record Cow

Brampton Basilia, imported and tested by B. H. Bull & Son, Brampton, Ont., is the line-bred Oxford Sultan of Oaklands Jersey cow that brought to Canada the world's record for butterfat by producing 1,312.8 pounds of butterfat and 19,012.3 pounds of milk. Basilia's breeding is similar line breeding as that of the bulls to be used by the Sidney Jersey Breeders.

Planning London Mighty Task for Civic Engineers

Chairman of County Council Expects Plans to Take Shape Within Ten Years—Metropolis
Was Never Designed and Much Stands in Way of Modern Developments

By OLIVIER CAREW

"I will not cease from mental fight,
Nor shall my sword sleep in my hand
Till we have built Jerusalem
In England's green and pleasant land."

LONDON (BUP).—The, or something akin to it—if for England we read London—seems to be the Town Planning ideal of the new London County Council. "The task of town planning London is the greatest of its kind ever undertaken," says Major Barnes, the Chairman of the London County Council Town Planning Committee. "Within ten years we should see our dream taking shape."

Whether the dream will ever materialize into the realm of actuality or (as so many other plans for the large-scale improvement of London have done) remain of the stuff that dreams are made of, is yet to be seen, but of the enthusiasm, the energy and the desire of the new Council to build a new London there can be no manner of doubt.

LONDON JUST GREW

In order to convey an idea of the difficulties which have always stood in the way of town planning in London, it is necessary to keep in mind both the history of London and its system of government. Be it remembered first and last and all the time, that London was never designed. It just grew. Hence most of our present-day troubles are the result of the fact that London is a sort of United States. There is at the heart of it the "City" of London. In what is now the central west of it lies the "City" of Westminster. All around these cities lie in an irregularly shaped area twenty-seven London boroughs. This area is about twenty-five to thirty miles square, and within it dwell some 8,000,000 of people.

IS SELF-GOVERNING

The "City" of London represents the London of old time within its ancient boundaries. It is self-governing and bows to no one—not even the King. The "City" of Westminster is the descendant of the settlement which grew up centuries ago under the shadow of what is now Westminster Abbey—the minister in the West. In the same way the twenty-seven boroughs are the villages, originally in the open country, developed into towns which, one by one, have been merged by growth and finally by administration into "London." Their boundaries now are invisible; there are no gaps between them. But although all these units are subject to the general control of the federal government, let us say—of the London County Council, yet they are self-governing. They have their own Mayors and Councilors. They pass their own laws. They light and pave their own streets as they choose. They assess and collect their own rates, i.e., their municipal taxes. Their interests frequently conflict one with another. They have their local jealousies.

ARE ANCIENT ROUTES

So much for administration. We turn to history.

Right down from Roman times to this day London has grown from century to century without a break in continuity. The great thoroughfares of London do but follow the ancient routes. Even if we go back to the days of the Romans, the roads which we ride where the Elizabethan roads. For generations this now enormous city grew, but it grew steadily. Now and again, when circumstances compelled it, attempts have been made to straighten or to widen its streets here and there. Thousands of millions of pounds have been spent on what, if considered individually and locally, have been great and ambitious schemes of betterment. They have been isolated and have formed no part of a general plan. Considered against London as a whole, they have been utterly futile.

And now, within a couple of decades, what hitherto has been a steady growth has turned from an architectural to geometrical progression and something must be done. The alternative is that in a measurable time the wheels of London, both in a literal and a metaphorical sense, will, for very congestion, cease to turn.

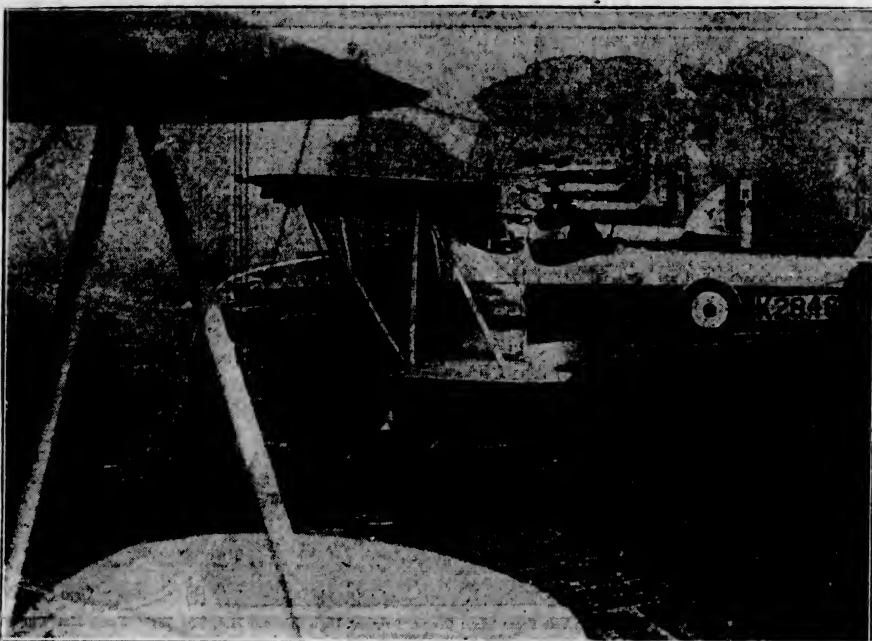

But just as, we are told, the hour produces the man, so it would seem it has provided the new Council—and that new Council intends to build a city with roads reserved exclusively for various kinds of traffic; a city without an ugly building; a city with fresh green squares substituted for miles of airless slums; a city with special zones for factories and for homes—a City Beautiful.

ASK CO-OPERATION

To that end the new London County Council has called into conference all the public bodies of London—the "cities," the boroughs, the railway companies—in fact, the thousand and one administrative powers that be, and has invited their co-operation in working out a plan for the regeneration of London. Failing co-operation, it will exert every legal power it possesses to compel it. Failing powers, it will do its utmost to obtain them from Parliament.

Every scheme for London's improvement put forward for a generation past is being reconsidered with an eye for its possible good points rather than, as hitherto, for its defects. Slum clearance schemes are to be put into operation and carried

New Demon Fighters for Defence of London

It seems that some provision is being made to defend as well as to attack in the new British Air Force programme when it is announced that the bomber squadrons of the Auxiliary Air Force are to be equipped as defence units, although hitherto regarded only as raiders. They are to be fitted out as Hawker Demon two-seater fighters, which are stated to be highly suitable for defence work. This photograph shows Hawker Demon fighters flying in close formation.

Civil Aviation Now in Forefront in Australia

Australia, in its civil aviation, will soon be in the forefront of the nations of the world, says an official statement issued at Canberra. The policy followed by the Commonwealth Government since it took office in 1932 has resulted in what is expected to be one of the most complete aerial transport systems in existence, linking Australia by fast services to a considerable portion of the globe. This should be achieved before the end of 1934.

This remarkable development grew from the appointment in 1932 of an inter-departmental committee to advise as to the future policy regarding air transport services. Last year, tenders were called for the following services: Darwin-Singapore (2,333 miles); Darwin-Charleville-Brisbane (2,028 miles); Charleville-Coolangamundra (628 miles); Katherine-Perth (2,252 miles), connecting at Katherine with the Darwin-Coolangamundra service; Melbourne-Hobart via King Island and Launceston (475 miles); and the minor services Cloncurry-Normanton (215 miles), and Ord River-Wyndham (158 miles).

This year the Government accepted tenders for all except the last-named (Ord River-Wyndham) service, and in addition decided to give South Australia direct access to the overseas air service by establishing a weekly service between Adelaide and Bourke. The contract for the Melbourne-Hobart service will ensure a daily service (except Sundays) across Bass Strait. All the new services should be in operation by the end of 1934. Modern British aircraft will be employed. The Government's estimated annual liability for the next five years is $565,000, but considerable revenue is expected from mail surcharge fees.

There will be an increase of approximately 130 per cent in the mileage flown annually by regular air services, and the Australian commercial and general community will benefit from the overseas mail connection. It is estimated that the regular air lines in Australia will total 11,000 miles next year, and that approximately 1,500,000 miles will be flown by all services in 1935.

These gratifying results will be achieved at an annual net cost considerably below the net cost of the purely internal services hitherto maintained. The Department of Civil Aviation has devoted a tremendous amount of attention to the ensuring of safe and efficient services.

Southwestern Parts of Cape Province Have Driest Summer in Forty Years

CAPETOWN (BUP).—Drought is working great havoc in the southwestern portions of Cape Province, which is experiencing the driest summer for forty years and the hottest for seven years.

One of the biggest reservoirs in the province, the Groot Kloof irrigation dam, which normally has 17,000,000 gallons, dried up completely.

Farmers are in despair, as there is no sign of wheat crops coming through the surface of the dried-up land, and lambs are dying in hundreds for lack of water. In the Caledon district half the young lambs died, and the land looks as bare as a street.

Farmers in the Napier district have already lost their crops, and all their hopes now are that the weather will permit them to sow seed a second time. Water has had to be carted huge distances for lambs, but the season has been a failure.

Schools broke up for the holidays in advance of the usual date because drinking water could not be obtained for the children.

"Wheat has been lying underground since April," says a report from the Mossel Bay district. "And there is not even a greenish tint on the majority of lands. Sheep farmers are suffering severe losses. More than fifty per cent of the new season's crop of lambs have died. Water holes have almost dried up, and with the exception of stagnant pools, there is little to quench the thirst of the animals."

Australia's Petition to King Is Seventy-Eight Feet Long

SYDNEY, N.S.W.—Western Australia's petition for secession from the federation of States forming the Commonwealth, to be presented to King George and the two British Houses of Parliament, will be written by hand and will be seventy-eight feet long and thirty inches wide.

The penman here is E. G. Saunders, a retired Civil Servant. Any such petitions must be hand-written to be "received" by the King and the British Parliament, and Saunders has undertaken to do the work.

Saunders has to make three copies. One is to the King, the second to the House of Lords, and the third to the House of Commons. Roughly, there are 900 lines in each scroll, which is twenty-six feet long. Erasures of any kind are not permitted. Even joins in the scroll must be written over to show that the document has not been interfered with. The petition will go to London in a casket made of the famous Western Australian wood, jarrah.

Walsingham, in Norfolk, Will Receive Pilgrims

LONDON.—There is in Norfolk a village called Walsingham, which by way of being an English Lourdes, it was once known as the Eng. Nazareth, and until the Reformation, was a place of pilgrimage for people from all parts of the world.

Here, it is said, the Virgin once appeared to the Lady Richeldis and asked her to construct a building like that in which the Virgin and Joseph were living at Nazareth at the time of the Annunciation, at the same time commanding a spring of holy water to appear. This was believed to possess miraculous healing power, and to Our Lady of Walsingham, up to the time of Henry VIII, had a cult as renowned and as beneficial as that which Our Lady of Lourdes has now.

In 1921 the pilgrimages were renewed by a group of Anglo-Catholics, and they have increased steadily for thirteen years. In 1933 there were 8,000 pilgrims. This month it is said that Cardinal Bourne may lead a pilgrimage to Walsingham.

THE HOLY HOUSE

The shrine, re-built in 1931, is a replica of the early shrine. The outer building, as in the old days, completely encloses the Holy House, which is some twenty-three feet by twelve feet and contains the image of Our Lady of Walsingham. Stones from churches and holy places are set into the walls of both Holy Houses and shrines. There is one from St. Paul's Cathedral, presented by Dean Inge, another from St. Peter's in Rome, and a third from the stable of the Nativity in Bethlehem. A side chapel contains what is said to be a piece of the true cross.

The miraculous well lies between the wall of the Holy House and the outer wall of the shrine. A flight of steps leads down to it. Pilgrims come here to drink from the long-handled silver ladle with which the priests dispense the water. There is also an open-air bath in the garden in which they can bathe their limbs or completely immerse themselves.

Sea Monster Found

LONDON.—Lying on the sands near Castletown is the body of a strange sea creature which fishermen and coastguards are at a loss to identify. It is said to resemble a mythical sea serpent. It is twenty-three feet long, and its sinewy body tapers to a tail, and is covered with a thick mane of hair. It has the head of a crocodile and two fins at the side of its back.

Death Duties in England Provide Immense Revenue

$7,469,814,030 Collected in Forty Years From Impost—One Family Pays Dues Three Times
Yielded Billions in Interest Charges

LONDON (BUP).—The institution of death duties is hardly an event which anyone would wish to celebrate, in the ordinary sense of that word. But in fact it is just forty years to this very day of writing since the passing into law of this country of the act which imposed death duties on all property on the decease of its owner.

In these forty years the gross amount which has been collected from death duties—from August 2, 1894—is the almost astronomical figure of $7,469,814,030.

Curiously enough, the opposition to the imposition of these new duties, "the greatest financial revolution since Walpole," was nothing like what might have been expected.

THREE TIMES PAID

There have been several other surprises in connection with the act. It is said in its support that the tax would normally be collectible only once in a generation. Yet in the family of the Father of the Act—Sir William Harcourt—it has been paid three times within that period.

Another notable thing is that in the twenty years before the War only a relatively small sum was paid. In the same period since the War nearly five billion dollars has been collected.

The net effect of such duties is one of the points which will always be arguable. Its opponents invite its supporters to consider how much greater the national income would have been if the great figure mentioned above had been wholly untouched. Reckoning a yield of five per cent, it would have been about $375,000,000 a year greater—and on that sum the Income Tax and surtax would be about $150,000,000.

Last year there was a tremendous fuss over here over the purchase from Russia by the British Museum of the Codex Sinaiticus—the oldest, or all but the oldest, manuscript known to be extant of part of the New Testament. The price paid to Russia was $500,000, and the British Government in effect guaranteed such sum as was not covered by public subscription.

About forty-five people in all the 45,000,000 folk in this country could read it. Perhaps a thousand took an intelligent interest in it. Perhaps another thousand took a curious interest in it. They merely wanted to see what the thing was.

WHY MONEY SPENT

Anyhow, the Government was left to provide $205,000 of the general taxpayers' money. So the other day there was a question asked in Parliament about it. Why, it was asked, was it thought advisable in the present financial conditions that such an amount should be paid out of public funds to acquire a manuscript of no practical use whatever and which had in any case been carefully preserved by Russia and was accessible in that country to the few scholars of the world who were interested.

The reply of the Financial Secretary to the Treasury was that "money must be spent in maintaining the beauty and dignity of the country."

No doubt 2,000,000 people who are unemployed in this country will appreciate the beauty and dignity of the Treasury's attitude.

New Times Are Bringing New Trades in England

LONDON.—"New times, new trades," is the theme of industrial activity in all parts of Britain. Industries which have been the mainstay of towns for generations have passed away, but others are taking their places.

The latest bulletin of the Travel and Industrial Development Association of Great Britain gives a dozen examples.

An old handloom which lay dismasted for a century has led to the foundation of a new industry at Port Talbot, Glamorgan. A man on holiday saw the loom and took it to Port Talbot, where tweeds, rugs and carpets are now being made by men who were unemployed steelworkers.

PORTABLE BUILDINGS

Howden-on-Tyne has made ships for generations. Now more than 100 of its workers make portable wooden buildings, including chalets, bungalows and garages.

Radcliffe, Lancashire, has secured its 112th industry, a women's felt hat factory. Manchester has become an official copper centre. Blackpool is to have its own film studio.

RODS AND BARS

Cardiff is to make steel rods and bars of a new type. Leicester breaks new ground with the manufacture of sand-faced concrete roofing tiles. Londonderry is going in for the large-scale manufacture of toys. Experiments are proceeding at a colliery at Consett, Durham, for making bricks from colliery waste. This company thus hopes to make its contribution to Britain's building rush, expected in the Autumn.

Duke Helps Youngsters

The Duke of York, carrying his poisoned hand in a sling, bids farewell to Capt. Patterson, one of the camp chiefs, as some four hundred odd youngsters leave London to attend the Duke's camp at Suffolk.

Ten-Ton Cake Is To Be Served at Hospital Benefit

MELBOURNE.—The contract to make, bake and serve the centenary birthday cake has been let. The cake will weigh ten tons. It will be cut into 50,000 slices, each with some icing and ornamentation. These slices will be sold in packages for 25c each for the benefit of the Lord Mayor's Hospitals Fund. The cake will be made in five tiers and baked in one bake. It will contain the following ingredients: A ton and a half of butter, a ton and a half of sugar, a ton and a half of flour, four and a half tons of dried fruit, three-quarters of a ton of almonds, and 36,000 eggs.

What's New and Interesting for the Women

To Tour Canada Urging Welfare Of Motherhood

OTTAWA.—One of the outstanding figures in maternal welfare in the English-speaking world will visit Canada for two months this autumn, according to plans announced by the Canadian Council on Child and Family Welfare. Dame Janet Campbell, D.B.E. (1924), M.D. (Lon.), who has just retired as Senior Medical Officer for Maternity and Child Welfare, at the same time remaining in her senior post with the Board of Health of the British Ministry of Health and Chief Woman Medical Adviser to the Board of Education of Great Britain since 1919, is coming here. She is a member of the Health Committee of the League of Nations, and at present closely associated in its studies on maternal and infant welfare.

Accompanied by Miss Eunice Dyke, secretary of the Canadian Council's division on Maternal and Child Hygiene, Dame Janet will visit all the largest cities in Canada as part of her educational campaign to arouse greater interest in the problems of maternal welfare. Her visit will coincide with the annual meeting of the National Council of Women at Ottawa in October.

Dame Janet was educated at the London School for Medicine for Women, and followed with post-graduate work in Vienna. After extensive hospital work she was called in 1919 to the newly-formed Ministry of Health as the Senior Medical Officer for Maternity and Child Welfare, at the same time remaining in her senior post with the Board of Health of the British Ministry of Health.

In 1928 she was named the medical member of the Committee on the Training of Midwives and also of the Committee on Maternal Mortality and Morbidity. It is in connection with her intensive work and studies in the intervening years that Dame Janet is known throughout the English-speaking world, and is regarded by the League of Nations as one of the outstanding international authorities on the subject.

Dame Janet retired from her post with the British Ministry in December, 1933, but continues to serve on many of the Ministry's and the League of Nations' committees on health subjects.

In Popcorn Weave

An imported novelty cotton fabric, popcorn weave, is the basis for this fetching white swaggar costume worn by Drue Leyton, picture actress.

Please taper from the neckline to release the swaggar fullness, and two square white buttons form the linked fastening. The three-quarter-length sleeves are deeply cuffed. A simple white frock is worn beneath the coat, and is topped by a lipstick red and white Ascot tie.

Sun Exposed Hands Need Special Care

Hands that have been exposed to the summer sun and the salt water are bound to need some special attention before they may be presented at the bridge table without apologies. Let's begin to get them in shape now. Professional treatments are very effective, but often they run into more money than some of us feel we can afford. There are home treatments that serve exceptionally well, if one only will be as conscientious about her self-apointments as she is about the ones for which she must pay.

Hands may be massaged with a gentle rotary motion from the wrists to the fingertips, using a good hand tissue cream while you work. Smooth the fingers separately from the tips to the base as if you were drawing on gloves.

Keep a lotion handy, and after each washing massage the lotion into the skin. A good hand lotion or cream belongs near the kitchen sink just as surely as do the slice of lemon for removing stains and a good pure cake of soap with which to wash the hands after doing any dirty work. And care should be used in the selection of the soap. Always use a nail brush to cleanse the nails. The brush will remove most of the dirt. If any be left, use an orange-wood stick with a bit of cotton wrapped around the tip. It is unwise to attempt to clean the nails with a file, as the metal is apt to scrape the skin which protects the under side of the nail and leave it rough. Then, the dirt catches in it constantly and it is next to impossible to get them clean.

When you dry your hands, take the end of the towel and gently push back the cuticle at the base of each nail. It helps to keep the cuticle soft, pushed back and prevents hangnails. If you notice hangnails, or in case the nails are brittle as a result of summer exposure, rub a little sweet oil or cold cream into them. Frequent use of hand lotions will keep the nails and hands soft.

There are beauty gloves which do much to improve the condition of the hands. These may be worn at night as a night glove. They are specially treated to give them a cold cream content. The gloves themselves are soft, flexible and permit free use of the hands and fingers. The excellent feature of the gloves is sufficient to keep the hands soft and clean.

Let the weekly or fortnightly manicure be your hand extravagance and have professional treatment.

Married Women Instruct Better Says Authority

NEW YORK (CP).—Married women, school teachers give their students better training, achieve better results and actually spend more time in the classrooms, according to a survey conducted by Dr. David Wilbur Peters, research worker at Columbia University.

The investigation covered the work of 1,842 teachers, half of whom were married and half single, matched for equivalence in age, training and experience. The result of the survey contradicts the assertion often repeated that married women teach only for money, and teaching as a profession holds no interest, said Dr. Peters.

SPINACH SALAD

One-fourth pound spinach, five medium carrots, one small head cabbage. Wash spinach well and chop it up with scissors. Grate the carrots and shred the cabbage. Toss it lightly together in a salad bowl and marinate it with dressing made by mixing equal parts of mayonnaise and French dressing sweetened with granulated sugar. Chill thoroughly before serving.

Lends Gown Beauty

ESTHER RALSTON

Noted screen star, lends her blond loveliness to this very attractive negligee. It is fashioned of pink satin and blue chiffon with wide angel wing sleeves, and a bunch of pink violets at the neckline. Satin ribbon ties it at the waist. Verily, the age of femininity has returned.

High Crowns, Large Berets Smart for Fall

High crowns are new, and brims around itself and held by a cord. Even the Suzy hat, inset next, has a small crown, and Suzy made the flattest hats of all the season. It is smooth brown felt, the brim turned up in the back, and tied with felt ribbon.

loping felt, trimmed with a blue grosgrain ribbon and a quill. Top right is another Patou model, the felt with crown and slouch brim—an important line for Fall. It is rimmed with a band of ribbed velvet, and runs through a metal buckle in front. The beret continues in all its glory—even more glory, in fact, as it is much larger. One of the most interesting is the one below at right, from Agnes. It is inspired by the 18th century, and is made of fall and flat. You put it on your head from back to front, pull it over the eyes, and flatten it with the hands so that it makes a jutting brim. Some women prefer to wear it pushed to one side, giving a profile.

Inexpensive Containers Interesting

By FLORENCE B. TERNHUNE
Flowers are always beautiful, of course, but oftentimes we cheat them of their birthright when we bring them into our homes and just stick them haphazardly into any handy vase. Then, not only are we robbing them of a fair chance to show their natural beauty, but we are spoiling one of the best contributions to genuine decorative charm in the house with an artless flower arrangement.

Even if you give thought to the arranging of the flowers, but have given little or no thought to the vase in which you put them, then you still have another step to go. For there is nothing that will ruin an otherwise interesting effect more than an inappropriate vase.

A vase or container that is weighty-looking, or very bold in color, should not be selected for light-colored, slender-stemmed or feathery flowers and leaves. And, similarly, a light, fragile thing is entirely inadequate to support large, or heavy dark-colored flowers. Flowers and their vases should companionably complement each other and not one war against the other for supremacy.

SIMPLE CONTAINER

Flowers of the general garden variety look their best in simple, unpretentious containers, whereas the eccentrically individual blossom requires a receptacle of equally exotic feeling. In other words, the same innate character qualities belong to-

Good for Supper or Bridge Lunch

WAFFLE-IZED GINGERBREAD

One-half cup sugar, three tablespoons butter, one egg, one-half cup milk, one teaspoon soda, one-half cup molasses, one and one-half cups flour, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon ginger, one teaspoon cinnamon. Cream butter and sugar, add beaten egg, then add alternately the dry ingredients and the molasses, which have been sifted together and the mixture of milk and molasses. This makes a soft batter which will need to be spread by the back of a spoon over the waffle iron. Bake three minutes. Use two sections for each serving, spreading one section with whipped cream and folding the other over and putting large spoonfuls of cream on top. This recipe will serve twelve.

gether, or else when the contrast is too strong one detracts from the other instead of seeming a unified whole.

A vase that is so conspicuously loud in color, or so "busy" in design, as to draw attention to itself and detract from the flowers, is entirely unsuitable. That type of ornament is better used only as a decorative vase, or occasionally for some leaves. Much of the elaborately embellished Italian pottery comes under this category.

You cannot plead poverty as an excuse for a lack of appropriate vases, for the stores are offering all sorts of splendid ones in price ranges for even the depleted purse. The modern glass is good in form and color, including the wonderfully clear white. Most flowers are interesting in glass, especially if it is translucent enough to show the stems. While we are on the subject of glass, let us be sure to use elaborately cut glass very sparingly, and only with the highly cultivated type of flower.

Brass or copper, if not too shiny bright, and the simpler forms of glazed and unglazed pottery, are delightful with the usual garden variety of our more "weedy" types of flowers, as asters, calendulas, mimulus, and the like. Reproductions of the older copper pieces are especially good for shape. Mellow old pewter is interesting, especially with flowers of delicate apricot, peach and yellow. Silver, however, is rather difficult, for unless a flower has the form distinction of the rose, it cannot hold its own socially against the quality and color of silver as a vase.

Style Whimsies

Shaded ombre stockings, very sheer, and intended for evening wear, are the newest thing in hose. They come in shades of burgundy, navy, brown and gunmetal. Heels and backs are dark, shading off into the lightest shade of the same color at the toes.

Algerian striped velvet is new in bags. In misty orange, olive, beige and black stripes, with twisted composition handles, they're dressy enough for evening.

You can go Wild West or Oriental on the beaches, as you wish. Natural straw hats and bandanas are just as stylish as coolie coats, hats and fixings.

Linen suits are society's choice on hot days at the race track. A young girl going to school or college in her freshman year, carries with her the atmosphere of her home. It shows in her manner and in her clothes. Thus her first impressions are made on teachers and classmates.

Her wardrobe should not be flashy if it can possibly be avoided. And it most especially should not be over-elaborate. Simple, yet smart, is the watchword of the college wardrobe.

BAKED HAM

Grape juice, leftover spiced pickle juice or sweet pickle relish gives an excellent flavor to baked ham. Use about a cupful and pour over it while baking.

Fall Sports Clothes Are To Be Simple

NEW YORK.—Clothes for Fall and Winter are agreeably simple. Gone are the frusy, puffy sleeves, the broad shoulders, the windblown doodads. The term for Autumn sports wear is "classic," but with a certain streamline touch of its own.

The silhouette is slimmer, the lines simpler. Emphasis is laid on weave and texture, rather than on tricks. Colors are discreet—heather, dark greens and browns, subtle combinations of dull tones mixed with grey. Variations are obtained by the use of plain silks with a varicolored cardigan, or by ladylike stripes.

Materials are sephyr, yarn, camel's hair, cashmere and heather, a weave as well as a color. Woven stripes, ribs, welts, waffles and waves add variety to plain knitting.

To melt chocolate use low temperature. The best method is to put squares of chocolate in top of double boiler and let them melt slowly over boiling water.

Facts and Fancies

To make burnt butter sauce, put butter in the saucepan and let it burn very gradually. If this is done too quickly a bitter taste results, but cooking slowly the burning point gives a delicious flavor. Eggs with burnt butter sauce are good. Burnt butter is the foundation of caramel flavor, but caramel needs sugar. The burnt butter by itself makes a nice sauce for breakfast or supper or light luncheon dishes.

A black sheer frock or suit with clip white accessories looks fresh and smart, even in wilting heat in the city.

Little Maids Ready for School

A young girl going to school or college in her freshman year, carries with her the atmosphere of her home. It shows in her manner and in her clothes. Thus her first impressions are made on teachers and classmates.

Her wardrobe should not be flashy if it can possibly be avoided. And it most especially should not be over-elaborate. Simple, yet smart, is the watchword of the college wardrobe.

These four little maids may go to school clothed as they are, and undoubtedly will create the most desirable impression, for their clothes are right, and they may be made at home by the girl herself and her mother.

At the left, a two-piece of checked wool skirt and dark wool blouse. The blouse has tucked shoulders, and buttons and scarf of check.

The sailor suit is easy to get into and easy to wear. It is a wool crepe skirt and dark wool blouse.

White washable collars on dark frocks are among the most useful clothes gadgets ever invented. A fresh collar on her everyday frock gives a girl a fresh outlook on life, and makes a most favorable impression on all beholders.

The third frock, of white angora, with three contrasting buttons across the front, a deep yoke across the back and pleats in the skirt, has a wide pique collar which is detachable and easy to put on.

The figure on the right is wearing a chevron-length coat in checked wool with a wood crepe skirt. A short-sleeved angora blouse is worn under the jacket.

Hats, as you see, are pert and modern, but not extreme.

Feminine Charm Of Woman Flyer Gains Friends

MELBOURNE, Australia (CP).—Miss Jean Batten's last flight to Australia from England brought her number of flying hours to 500.

She left England wearing a fur-lined suit, a woolen pullover, a tweed skirt and a leather jacket. The rest of her kit was packed in a small compartment. The woolen pullover was left at Athens, the tweed skirt stayed behind at Cyprus, and the fur-lined suit was left at Damascus, to be sent back to England. For the rest of her journey she flew in tropical kit, with a solar helmet, which she said, prevented sunstroke and averted sunburn.

Men and women who met Miss Batten at the station when she stepped off the Sydney express admired her courage during her flight, but they seemed most of all to like her very feminine charms. She is small and slim, with dark, wavy hair, and she is only twenty-three.

She has the poise which usually is associated only with those accustomed to deal with crowds.

Cold cream and cylinder heads are of equal importance to her. With the courage that carried her through her flight on the third attempt—"the third time is lucky," she said—she is feminine enough to admit being pleased because she arrived at Darwin with a minimum of sunburn. Before she left, her mother had filled a small case with all sorts of cold creams and sunburn lotions, which she found time, somehow, to use.

Miss Batten's plans are somewhat indefinite, but soon she will be married to Colonel Edward Walter, an enthusiastic amateur aviator, who lent one of the wings of his machine to replace a damaged wing for her flight to Australia.

The celebrations were organized partly by the Belgrade Society of Former Serbian Students in Britain, and simultaneously there was a commemorative service in Belgrade.

A representative of King Alexander attended the Sarajevo centenary, when a commemorative service in the Protestant church and a memorial meeting were later held. Born in December, 1883, Miss Irby was the daughter of an English admiral, Frederick Paul Irby, the second son of Lord Boston. Admiral Irby commanded the British Fleet in the South Atlantic and was instrumental in suppressing slavery in West Africa.

Inheriting a considerable fortune, Miss Irby went on a European tour with her companion and friend, Miss Muir Mackenzie, and these two English spinsters found themselves eventually in the Balkans. Impressed by the sufferings of the Bosnian Serbs under the Turks, Miss Irby devoted her life to relieving distress in Bosnia and Herzegovina.
